Lawyers Battle Over Testimony of Frank's Nervousness; Witness Swears Negro Was in Factory About 1 o'Clock

JURYMEN SKETCHED AS THEY LISTEN TO EVIDENCE IN FRANK CASE

DARLEY'S ADMISSIONS ABOUT FRANK'S DEMEANOR OFFSET BY HIS EVIDENCE IN REBUTTAL

Having Admitted Frank Trembled, That He Was Pale and Seemed "Upset," on Cross-Examination Mr. Darley Said Frank Was Naturally of a Nervous Temperament and Told of Tedious Work He Did on Saturday in Preparing Financial Sheet

JUDGE ROAN REVERSES HIS RULING IN REFERENCE TO EVIDENCE ABOUT WHETHER OTHERS WERE NERVOUS

Attorneys for Defense Had Intimated That His Refusal to Admit This Evidence Was Good Ground for Appeal—Mrs. White's Testimony That She Saw Negro Lurking Near Stairway at 1 o'Clock Saturday a Feature of Morning Session

Little progress was made at the morning session Friday of the fifth day of the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan. The state showed by one witness that a negro was sitting on a box on the main floor shortly before 1 o'clock at the point Jim Conley claims he was sitting when he says Frank called him.

The state also introduced its best testimony relative to the nervousness and general demeanor of the defendant on the morning that the crime was discovered.

The witness, who gave this testimony was N. V. Darley, who also materially aided the defense by a number of points brought out on his cross-examination by Attorney Reuben R. Arnold. Considered of special value to the defense was his statement that with the time clock in the condition that it was on Sunday anyone understanding its mechanism could have made the punches for twelve hours within five minutes. The defense brought out by Darley a statement that it had been hammering home since the trial first started, namely that the elevator and its motor made much noise when running and that a saw on the fourth floor ran simultaneously with the elevator. The inference is that the defense will argue that if the elevator ran shortly after noon or even up to 3 o'clock that White and Denham, working on the fourth floor, would necessarily have heard it.

The same witness also asserted that a financial sheet gotten up Saturday afternoon was in Frank's handwriting and that it take three hours or more to do this work.

The defense made a timely rebuttal of Darley's testimony that Frank displayed unusual nervousness following the discovery of the murder, and used Darley himself to refute, to a certain extent, his own testimony. Solicitor Dorsey, in his examination of the witness, had drawn the statement from him that the accused was nervous, that his hand trembled when he went to run the elevator, and that he was pale and was trembling when he rode to the police station. When Attorney Arnold took the witness he drew from him the assertion that Mr. Frank was of a naturl nervous temperament and that frequently he (Darley) had to take charge of affairs at the factory, prio rto the murder, on account of the accused's nervousness. Frank, declared Darley, often rubbed his hands together and was unable to do much work when he was in one of his nervous states.

Mrs. White was also an important witness in reference to Frank's nervousness, declaring that when she went into the factory at about 12:30, just after the state claims the crime was committed, Frank jumped when she spoke to him.

When court convened after lunch, Judge Roan reversed himself on his ruling at the morning session. By reversing this ruling he holds now that the defense may introduce evidence to show that others besides the accused were nervous at the pencil factory following the discovery of the body of Mary Phagan. Attorney Rosser, for the defense, had indicated in a remark to the court at the morning session that the defense would likely appeal the case on this point if the jurist held to his ruling.

Judge Roan also announced his decision in the matter of Darley testifying relative to the contrast or comparison of handwriting on the financial sheet made out by Frank on the Saturday of the murder and others made out prior to that date. Judge Roan held that Darley would have to qualify as a handwriting expert to testify along these lines.

STATE INTRODUCES WITNESSES.

Mr. Arnold, in a discussion with attorneys for the state, made the remark that the prosecution need not fear that he would fail to introduce evidence. If the defense introduces any evidence at all, as the attorneys now think it will, it will probably introduce many witnesses and the trial will be prolonged a number of days.

At the close of the morning session Friday the indications were that the state would not close its case until Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. Jim Conley, the state's principal witness, has not been called yet, and probably will not be until Saturday. It will take a whole day if not longer for his examination.

COURT CONVENES.

At 8:40 o'clock the crowd was admitted to the court room, filling the seats immediately and leaving a number of disappointed people outside. A large part of the crowd had been waiting since 7 o'clock.

Leo M. Frank, the accused, arrived early, under custody of the sheriff. He entered the court room at 8:50 o'clock, with his wife and mother, smiling cheerfully, and responding to the greetings of a number of friends.

Mrs. J. Arthur White was called to the stand as the first witness. Her husband has been employed by the National Pencil company, for the past two years, she said.

On April 26, she testified, she went to the National Pencil factory twice. The first time she remained from 11:30 to 11:50 o'clock. She returned at 12:30 and left about 1. On the first visit she stated she saw Miss Hall, the stenographer, and Frank and two men in his office.

"I asked Mr. Frank if I could see Mr. White. Mr. Frank then was standing in the inside office. He asked me if I was Mr. White's wife, and when I answered yes, he said I looked like a Campbell."

The witness explained that her father and brother, named Campbell, had been working for two years in the National Pencil factory.

"Mr. Frank sent Miss Emma Freeman for Mr. White and he came down and talked to me at the foot of the steps on the second floor."

Solicitor Dorsey questioned the witness about her second visit to the factory. Mrs. White said that she looked at the clock when she arrived on her second visit, and that the time was about 12:30, possibly one minute to or after that hour.

SAYS FRANK JUMPED.

"When I came up the steps," she said, "I saw Mr. Frank standing by the safe in the outside office. His back was turned to me. I asked him if Mr. White and Mr. Denham had gone back to work.

"He jumped, as if surprised."

"Is there any doubt about his jumping?" asked the solicitor.

"No."

"What was he doing at the safe?"

"I didn't see him doing anything."

"What did you do?"

"I went upstairs to the fourth floor, where Harry Denham and my husband were working. They were working on

M'ADOO'S PLAN IS TREMENDOUS HELP TO SOUTH'S FARMERS

Congressmen and Senators Rejoice Over Announcement of $50,000,000 to Facilitate Movement of the Crops

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The plan of the Wilson administration to avert a contraction of the currency in New York and to facilitate the movement of the crops in the south and west, as announced last night by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, has met with instant approval among senators and congressmen from the sections of the country to be affected.

They regard it as an evidence of President Wilson's determination to combat, with all of the resources at his command any attempt on part of New York bankers to contract the money market at a time when the farmers of the country most need it. They believe that the plan outlined by Mr. McAdoo

FOREIGN POWERS NOT PRESSING FOR ACTION IN MEXICO

Secretary Bryan Issues Statement to This Effect Friday, After Conference With President Wilson

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—After a conference with President Wilson today Secretary Bryan declared that United States was in no way being pressed for action in Mexico, and issued the following statement:

"The statement which appeared in some of the morning papers to the effect that European governments are bringing pressure to bear on the United States to compel aggressive action in Mexico is entirely without foundation.

Administration officials were pleased to observe the reports from Mexico City that a reform element in the Mexican chamber of deputies is planning to submit peace proposals to both factions in the revolution. So far is known the policy of the American government will be to await the outcome of negotiations of this character.

ACCEPTABLE MEN SCARCE.

The chief difficulty in negotiating peace, it is admitted by Mexicans of all factions, is the selection of a non-partisan provisional president. The suggestion was made today by some prominent Mexicans in Washington that on account of the scarcity of men of ability who have taken no part in the Mexican disputes and chasing politics, it might be expedient to select one of the veteran diplomats now representing Mexico in posts abroad. Men of such character it was pointed out, have no political affiliations and would give the situation the benefit of their experience in fields of diplomacy. Senor Carvvarubias, minister to Russia, and Senor Gilbert Crespoy Martinez were mentioned.

AMBASSADOR SUMMONED AGAIN.

The house foreign affairs committee today decided to ask Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson to appear and outline his views on Mexico.

SOME OPPOSE HEARING.

The determination of the committee to call Ambassador Wilson developed considerable difference of opinion on whether his testimony, in view of the wide variance between his views and those of the president and Secretary Bryan, might not prove embarrassing to the administration.

Some members of the committee, which is strongly inclined to give the president and the state department a free hand in the situation, believed Ambassador Wilson should not be called until Secretary Bryan and the president could be consulted.

HEARING CALLED OFF.

Chairman Flood, after a conference with the president and Secretary Bryan, announced that no meeting would be held tomorrow and that he had received a telegram from Ambassador Wilson, in

Picnic and Theories Mark Noon Hour in Frank Trial Court Room

Spectators Remain From 5 to 7—Lunch Boys Acquiring Wealth

A court room where a man is on trial for his life is a strange place for a picnic, yet from 12:30 to 2 o'clock every afternoon the room where the Frank trial is taking place has all the appearance of the pavillion at Grant park on a hot July Saturday.

The benches are spread with boxes and sacks, sandwiches, chicken, cake, all the other essentials of a picnic lunch save ice-cold lemonade, are passed about from man to man, and the noon hour dinner is eaten with as much good-natured laughter as if there was never such a thing in the world as a murder trial.

True, most of the table conversation is of the latest testimony, and if there are after dinner speeches made they are sure to take a theorette turn. But the afternoon session is an aid rather than a hindrance to digestion.

There are even some people who do not eat. They had rather go hungry than leave the court room and lose a coveted seat.

As a result there is not much chance for any spectator who comes to the trial in the afternoon with the hope of getting in. The benches are never deserted, and those who come at 7 o'clock in the morning are sure to stick until 5 in the afternoon.

Thursday at noon relief came to the hungry ones. A small red-headed boy slipped by the guard with a big basket on his arm.

He had hardly gotten inside the court room and opened his mouth to shout "Sandwiches!" before the spectators fell upon him.

In five minutes he was stripped of his load. What matter if he charged four bits apiece for pieces of mince pie? There was not a purchaser who kicked. It was worth half a dollar to retain one's seat and be well fed at the same time.

Fractures Man's Skull; Unknown Tells Him It's 'Too Bad' and Drives On

ROME, Ga., Aug. 1.—Luther O'Bryant, a grocery clerk, is suffering from a fractured skull, due to injuries received yesterday when he was knocked from a bicycle by an unknown man driving a buggy. The wheels of the vehicle passed over his chest, and the hoofs of the horse struck him in the head.

The driver asked if he was hurt, and upon receiving an affirmative reply, said: "That's too bad," and drove on.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS FAVORS HOKE SMITH

Special Exception Is Made of His Resolution to Appoint Commission

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The Democratic caucus yesterday afternoon made a special exception in favor of Senator Hoke Smith's resolution for the creation of a vocational education commission, to be appointed by the president.

Congressman Hughes, as chairman of the house education committee, called the Smith resolution to the attention of the caucus. He declared that the education committee desired to report the resolution for passage by the house, and made an earnest appeal that its consideration by the house be allowed. The caucus was moved by Mr. Hughes' plea.

The Smith resolution has already passed the senate. It appropriates $15,000 for the study of vocational education and provides for the appointment of a commission by the president to carry on the investigation and report to congress.

ANDERSON'S APPEAL GETS $280,000 CUT IN APPROPRIATIONS

Senate Committee Whacks Off 7 Per Cent on Appropriations to All Common Schools, High Schools and Pensions

The appropriations committee of the Georgia senate acted on the appropriations bill of the house immediately after adjournment Friday afternoon, with the result that it will go to the senate with the approximately $280,000 excess of expected revenue in the house bill entirely cut away.

The committee's action followed a speech delivered to the senate as a whole by its president, J. Randolph Anderson, in which he impressed upon the senate the necessity for a reduction in the appropriations bill as passed by the senate.

While the senate was in session a sub-committee, composed of Senators Stark, Miller, Smith and Turner, conferred with Governor John M. Slaton in regard to the bill.

In the committee meeting, which was an executive session, it was decided to make a 7 per cent cut on all appropriations in common schools, high schools and pensions, in order that a fair and impartial cut might be made of each.

HOW CUTS RANGED.

The following reduction was made on each appropriation: Pensions, $74,500; common schools, $178,000; Georgia Tech, $5,600; Athens Normal School, $3,325; Milledgeville Normal and Industrial college, $3,775; Valdosta Normal School, $1,750; University of Georgia, $3,375; agricultural school, $7,000; August Medical school, $2,100.

At the conclusion of the committee meeting the chairman, Senator Stark, stated that the members of the committee hated to make the cut, but that they had to do it. He said that the committee would stand united in favoring the cut bill in the senate; that they would be only too happy to change the bill if the house would adopt some measures increasing the state's revenue, but that if nothing was done the committee would refuse to increase the appropriations beyond those provided in the bill as cut.

APPEAL OF ANDERSON.

In speaking to the senate on the appropriations bill Senator Anderson said in part as follows:

"The chair desires to ask the chairman of the appropriation committee to have another meeting of his committee during the day. The condition which confronts us today is of such a serious nature that those who form a part of the administration charged with conducting the affairs of this state find it necessary to call the attention of the senate to the gravity and seriousness of the situation. The governor of the state, the president of the senate, the chairman of the finance and the chair-

VENEZUELA UP IN ARMS TO REPEL CASTRO INVASION

Federalists Prepare to Withstand Revolutionists Headed by Ex-President Castro

(By Associated Press.)

CARACAS, Venezuela, Aug. 1.—In consequence of the outbreak of the revolution in Venezuela and the invasion of the country by forces under the leadership of former President Cipriano Castro, the federal council today constitutionally authorized President Juan Vicants Gomez to assume dictatorial powers until the movement is crushed.

President Gomez on Wednesday night sent the following telegram to the governors of all the Venezuelan states:

"Generes! Cipriano Castro, impelled by an ambition and the craze for power, has provoked a revolution in this republic by ordering him partisans to arm themselves against the constitutional government.

"Already rebel forces in several localities have disturbed the public order.

"It is necessary for you to be alert and to act rapidly and energetically in assisting the government to crush the rebels.

"The peace of the country, which conscientious Venezuelans are obliged to nourish, cannot be left at the mercy of adventurers who possess no idea of decorum.

"I trust you will fulfill your duty."

The governors in their respective states promise support of the governor. Some of them requested the dispatch of additional arms and ammunition.

It was humored here yesterday that Cipriano Castro was on board a steamer off Coro but the government received no definite news of his landing on Venezuelan territory.

REBELS DRIVEN BACK.

Official dispatches state that an invading force from Colombia under command of General Dosario Gonzalez has been driven back on the frontier of the state of Tachira, where Colonel Romero, in command of the state troops has forced the rebels to abandon their positions.

On the other side of Venezuela, revolutionists commanded by a nephew of Castro, attacked the city of Macuro, on Tuesday, and were defeated, it was claimed, by government troops led by General Zayago.

No troops have been sent from Caracas to meet the rebels as the government believes the state troops strong enough to deal with them.

TO PRINT ALL NEWS.

The president today announced that all news of hostilities would be published whether favorable or unfavorable to the government.

He says he feels h ecan safely do this because of his splendid army and also because public opinion is with the government.

Telegraphic communication between the capital and the remainder of the republic is maintained.

CASTRO LANDS.

Castro, whose whereabouts hitherto have been indefinite, has landed at Coro in the gulf of Venezuela. This information was cabled to state department today by American Consul Thomas W. Voetter at La Guira, the port of Caracas.

Report of Landing of Castro Is Confirmed

(By Associated Press.)

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao, Aug. 1.—Corroboration of the report of Cipriano Castro's landing at Coro, Venezuela, was received here today from Puerto Cabello.

Want Postmaster Removed Because He Has the Mumps

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—A Republican postmaster is bad enough under a Democratic administration, but a Republican postmaster with the mumps is an affliction that good Democrats cannot tolerate without protest. This evidently is he conviction of cerain residents of Almond, N. Y., one of whom has written to Senator O'Gorman asking for the immediate removal of George P. Hellmer, Republican postmaster there.

The request for Postmaster Hellmer's removal came several days ago and Senator O'Gorman asked for a statement of the reasons for the office holder's per*emptory dismissal. He received a reply* today to the effect that Hellmer had the mumps and was assorting and delivering mail with his head tied up. The writer said the residents of the town feared the contagion might spread. The senator is in a quandary. He is said to feel that a man with the mumps is in misery enough, without having his troubles added to by the loss of his job.

RATES ON PRINT PAPER "NOT UNREASONABLE"

Commission Reserves Its Decision as to Alleged Unjust Rates Against Atlanta

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The interstate commerce commission decided today that the rates on print paper from Bellows Falls, Vt., and other points in New England, on newspaper print paper are "not unreasonable" nor "unjustly discriminatory," as compared with rates on wrapping paper from the same points."

The commission reserved its decision as regard alleged "unjust and discriminatory rates" against Atlanta and in favor of Chattanooga pending its decision in the case of the Atlanta freight bureau against the Southern railway.

The cases were brought before the commission by the Atlanta newspapers and were argued a couple of months ago.

GLENN RIDDELL SALE TO BE FOUGHT IN COURTS

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 1.—The Liverpool Atheneum has received notification that the legality of its recent sale of the so-called Glenn Riddell manuscripts of the poet Burns will be taken to the courts. The London dealers who bought the manuscripts supposedly for an American, at a price supposedly to have been $25,000, have been warned not to part with them for the present.

The action in the courts will be based upon the contention that the manuscripts, which were presented to the Atheneum over a century ago by Dr. Currie, a Burns critic, had only been loaned to him and that they really belong to the nearest heir of the poet, who is Miss Annie Burns.

Even if Dr. Currie's ownership was established it may also be contended the Atheneum, which received them from his widow, is an unconditional gift virtually convenanted to keep them permanently and had no authority to dispose of them as it did.

WILSON GIVES GEORGIA LAD NAVY APPOINTMENT

High Honor Bestowed on Americus Boy Who Desires Annapolis Place

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—President Wilson will give one of his ten naval academy appointments to Leonard Parker, of Americus, Ga., son of E. C. Parker, a well known warehouseman and grandson of M. B. Councill. Young Parker will be one of the first, if not the first, Georgia boy ever to receive an appointment to Annapolis from the hands of a president.

Congressman Crisp today received from the president a letter, telling of his purpose to name young Parker for Annapolis. In this letter, which Mr. Crisp characterized as "mighty nice," Mr. Wilson declared that he had informed the navy department of his selection of the young Georgian, and Parker will stand his entrance examination next April.

Judge Crisp represents a district made up for the most part of counties that were formerly in the Second and Third districts. Under the law, members of congress are entitled to two appointments to the naval academy every four years. Judge Crisp found that the two naval academy appointments had been filled by Congressman Rodden-

SENATE TURNS MULHALL OVER TO HOUSE QUIZZERS

Cross-Examination of Confessed Lobbyist Ends—Committee to Consider Letters

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Cross-examination of Martin M. Mulhall, confessed lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, ended today before the senate lobby committee.

Mulhall was excused until Monday, and turned over to the house lobby committee, the senate committee will turn next week to the files of the National Association of Manufacturers and an examination of its officials.

bery and Congressman Hughes from counties now in Crisp's district. This left him without an appointment.

He explained his dilemma to the president and gave young Parker high commendation, with the result that Mr. Wilson has decided to name the young man as a "cadet from the United States at large."

FIRST GARBAGE BURNED IN THE NEW CREMATORY

Capt. R. M. Clayton Believes the Plant Will Prove Satisfactory

The city began the regular operation of the new crematory Friday morning, garbage being used as fuel for the first time. Carts from all over the central section of the city began dumping in the big concrete pit at 7 o'clock, and at 9:30 the capacious grab baskets began to empty garbage into the third furnace. The other two have yet not been fired up.

Fires were started last week, and the furnace was intensely hot, readily consuming the garbage.

Captain R. M. Clayton, chief of construction, watched the operation of the plant carefully from all points, and on leaving said:

"In my opinion the new crematory will prove thoroughly satisfactory. From an engineering standpoint, I see no defect that should prevent its efficient service to the city, and until the official test is made I am in favor of believing that the plant will do just what is claimed for it."

Chief John Jentzen, of the sanitary department, and some members of council and of the board of health watched the proceedings carefully Friday morning, expressing much interest in the method of operation.

COMMITTEE APPROVES PRIMARY ELECTION BILL

The bill of Representatives Cooper and Wheatley, of Ware, providing for the holding of state primaries not later than June 15 before the fall elections, has been recommended for passage to the house by the committee on general judiciary No. 2.

Other bills were favored by the committee as follows: By Mr. Moon, of Troup, to fix fees of tax collectors at 1 per cent on corporation taxes; by Mr. Allen, of Glynn, to allow corporations to change their location by a two-thirds vote of their stockholders; by Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, to provide a right of action against a person who negligently kills a dog.

WIFE AND BABY SEE MAN FINED AS "PEEPING TOM"

Three young women who live in an apartment at 49 Washington street appeared before Recorder Broyles Thursday afternoon and testified to discovering Will E. Nace, of 32 McDaniel street, and H. R. Greenlee, of 400 Spring street, playing the role of "Peeping Toms" at their window last Tuesday night.

Greenlee and Nace entered vigorous denial, declaring they were on the roof to get some tools belonging to Nace.

Recorder Broyles declared the defense ridiculous, and fined Nace $15 and costs, but released Greenlee on probation.

Nace's young and pretty wife, with a baby in her arms, was present at the hearing.

SCHOOL BOOK BILL NOW UP TO RULES COMMITTEE

If Not Passed at This Session, It Must Wait Five Years

July 31, 1913.

Editor The Journal.

In answer to many inquiries I desire to state that the bill for the state commissioner to edit, select, or secure copyrights to text books in Georgia, and when approved by the state board of education to print same by competitive bids and sell to the school children of Georgia at cost, has been favorably reported by the committee on education by substitute, and it is now with the committee on rules to make it a special and continuing order until disposed of. I have introduced a resolution to this effect. This is all I can do.

I think the measure very important to the people of Georgia. If the bill is not passed, then the board of education will shortly have to make a contract for five years and no legislation for five years can be of any benefit to the school children. The bill provides that the contract to be made for school books shall stipulate that the board can abrogate it after six months' notice to the publishers.

The bill has the hearty support of our state school commissioner, Prof. Brittain, who will not object to making a practical test and see if we are not paying a great deal too much for school books.

Very truly,

(Signed) C. R. M'CRORY.

Deaf and Dumb Man Watches for Hours At the Frank Trial

There was one man at the trial of Leo M. Frank Thursday afternoon to whom the testimony of the witnesses, the speeches of the attorneys, the comment of the spectators, meant nothing.

He could not hear or speak a word.

Yet hour after hour he stood near the rear door, his eager brown eyes flitting rapidly from figure to figure, at times a pathetic light in them, as if he would have liked to know what they were all talking about.

To all appearances he was just like any other spectator, a small, dark-faced man clad in blue suit. Not until another spectator turned and said something to him was it known that he was a deaf mute. He shook his head, pointed to his lips, and smiled wistfully.

What did the trial mean to this man? Why did he want to stand all the afternoon in the court room, where, as he was not a lip reader, the whole proceedings were to him but a monstrous jumble?

His presence illustrated, as has nothing else, the intense interest which the Frank trial is creating. It showed why the public struggles to get into the court room every afternoon, why the people on the outside will rush panting to the rear door just to get a glimpse of Leo Frank as he steps into his automobile, Curiously enough, this deaf mute to the court room has gripped hundreds of others. They are there "just to see."

HUSBAND WITH AXE HELD FOR POLICE BY BOARDER

Fleeing Wife Had Locked Self in Closet—Hutchinson Placed on Probation

According to witnesses in police court Friday morning the quick action of M. W. Cornett, of 115 Forrest avenue, prevented serious results in a quarrel between R. L. Hutchinson, flagman for the Southern railway, living at the same place, and his wife.

Hutchinson had been drinking, according to witnesses, and his wife locked herself in a closet, screaming for help. Her husband seized an axe, it is alleged, and attempted to demolish the door when Cornett leaped upon him, bringing him to the floor. Cornett then summoned the police.

Hutchinson was placed in charge of Probation Officer Coogler.

Mr. Bramlett is well known here, having formerly been engaged in the restaurant business in Atlanta.

Mr. Bramlett met his death when a man rifled the cash register. As the robber left Mr. Bramlett seized an awning crank and followed. The robber saw him and fired twice.

MUNICIPAL COURT BILL PASSED BY THE HOUSE

There Are to Be Sections, One for Fulton and One for DeKalb County

The house of representatives Thursday passed by unanimous vote a substitute for the bill creating the municipal court of Atlanta introduced by the representatives from Fulton and DeKalb counties.

After the introduction of the original bill, a number of amendments were proposed by Messrs. Field and Smith, of DeKalb county, practically all of which referred to the operation of the court in that part of the city of Atlanta which is within DeKalb county.

These amendments were submitted to the committee of the Atlanta Bar association, and in order to meet the suggestions of the DeKalb members, it was deemed advisable to rewrite entirely that portion of the bill relating to the DeKalb division or section of the court. This was done, and the bill as rewritten was acceptable to the representatives from both counties and offered as a substitute. It will probably be acted upon by the senate within the next few days, and should reach the governor for approval within a week.

Under the bill as passed, there will be two sections of the municipal court of Atlanta, one to be called the Fulton section and to have jurisdiction over that portion of the city of Atlanta in Fulton county, and the other to be called the DeKalb section and to have jurisdiction over that portion of the city of Atlanta in DeKalb county.

The substitute bill as passed provides for very few changes from the original bill so far as it relates to the establishment of the Fulton section of the court. There is no change in the method of selection of the judges and other officers of this section of the court or of the judiadiction of court as to amount and subject matter, and the officers will be paid salaries according to the plan already made public.

ADAMSON FAMILY HOLDS REUNION AT GRANT PARK

Noted Men Expected to Attend Meeting of Descendants of Greenberry Adamson

A reunion of the Adamson family is being held Friday at Grant park, with dinner on the ground, speeches and good cheer for all. At the reunion two years ago over 200 members of that distinguished family were present.

Among those expected to be present are Congresman W. C. Adamson, of the Fourth district; A. F. Adamson, of Reed, Ga.; Robert Adamson, of New York City, secretary to Mayor Gaynor; Colonel Ralph Adamson, of Carrollton, and others.

The Adamson family of Georgia is descended from Greenberry Adamson, who came to Wilkes county, Ga., in 1792, and married Sarah Coates. He had six sons and two daughters. He moved to Clayton county, where it is said the name of Adamson occurs oftener on the census rolls than that of Smith or Jones.

MOTHERS' CUSTODY BILL TO BE HEARD MONDAY

Lawyers Invited to Speak on Measure Giving Children to the Mother

The bill of Representative John Y. Smith, of Fulton, and Representative Samuel L. Olive, of Richmond, which seeks to wipe from the code of Georgia the old barbaric law denying a mother the custody of her minor children, will be given consideration Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock by general judiciary committee No. 1 of the house.

The bill was to have been considered this afternoon at 3 o'clock, but on account of the absence from the city of Chairman Wahlwender, of the judiciary committee, a postponement was made to Monday.

The bill as drawn makes the mother, in case of separation from her husband, the custodian of children under fourteen years of age unless she is shown to be unfit to raise them. It is a conservative measure, as compared to the one which Judge Henry C. Hammond, of Augusta, has urged, and no doubt will meet with a favorable report from the committee. The press of the whole state has denounced the Georgia law as it now stands as an injustice to Georgia motherhood, a shameful statute that should be blotted from the code. In both the house and senate there is growing sentiment in favor of legislation at this session of the legislature to right this long-standing injustice, and it is probable that the measure will be given an early place upon the calendar.

A number of Atlanta lawyers will appear before the committee Monday afternoon. Representatives Smith and Olive invite all who favor their measure of its principle to be present.

SOUTHERN TEXTILE MEET TO BE INVITED TO ATLANTA

An effort will be made by Atlanta members to add this onvention to the already long list Atlanta has now secured. Cities making efforts to secure the convention are Raleigh and Greensboro, N. C., and Greenville, S. C. About 400 textile manufacturers usually attend the convention.

ATLANTA PASSENGER CLUB WILL GIVE A BANQUET

The Atlanta Passenger club will entertain two of its members, W. H. Leahy and C. F. Stewart, with a farewell dinner in the Georgia pine room at the Hotel Ansley Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Leahy is severing his connection with the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad as general passenger agent to accept a position with the Atlanta chamber of commerce.

WATCHMAN SWEARS ELEVATOR WAS OPEN; CHANGES EVIDENCE

E. F. Holloway Angers Dorsey When He Testifies Contrary to Affidavit—Had Told Dorsey Elevator Switch Was Locked

Court adjourned at 4:58 o'clock until 9 o'clock Friday morning after a day of surprises in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, in the National Pencil factory building.

That the switch board which controls the motor used to operate the elevator in the National Pencil factory, where Mary Phagan was murdered, was left unlocked Saturday morning when he left the building at 11:45 o'clock, and that anybody could have entered and run the elevator up and down the shaft during the balance of the day, was the statement of E. F. Holloway, one of the factory's watchmen at the trial of Leo M. Frank late Thursday afternoon.

Although Holloway made an affidavit for Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, which he identified in the court room, swearing to the fact that he left the switch box locked on that Saturday, he positively declared on Thursday that he left it unlocked, and when confronted with his own signature answered, "I forgot."

When Holloway took the stand he had hardly started his narrative when Solicitor Dorsey cut him short and addressed the court:

"I wish to state that I have been entrapped by this witness." The solicitor's remarks followed the statement of Holloway that he unlocked the switch box to operate the motor to cut some boards and ran the elevator up to the third floor for White and Denham, and left the box unlocked.

Dr. Claude Smith, city bacteriologist, was on the stand for a while and testified that stains upon certain chips which were brought to him by city detectives, presumably cut from the second floor of the pencil factory, contained blood corpuscles. He could not say, however, that it was human blood, he only knew that it was the blood of a mammal, and under cross-examinatfon by Attorney Rosser admitted that it might have been the blood of a mouse. Dr. Smith examined the shirt, said to have been found in the house of Newt Lee, and declared that the shirt was not soiled save for blood stains and that it appeared not to have been worn recently, as there were no body odors on it.

Mary Phagan had been dead ten or fifteen hours when her body was examined by William A. Gheesling, of P. J. Bloomfield's undertaking establishment, shortly after 4 o'clock on the Sunday morning her body was discovered in the basement of the pencil factory, according to Gheesling's testimony given at the trial of Leo M. Frank during Thursday afternoon's session. Thus according to the undertaker, the little girl met her death some time between the time that she entered the factory at 12:10 o'clock Saturday afternoon and 6 o'clock of the same day, not later than 6 o'clock.

MRS. APPELBAUM PRESENT.

Mrs. Callie Scott Appelbaum, whose trial and acquittal upon the charge that she murdered her husband in an Atlanta hotel was a recent sensation in Atlanta, became one of the women spectators in the court room shortly after the afternoon session convened.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Aaron Stafford testified that on Friday preceding the murder he had swept the floor of the entire metal room. The job took him about three hours, he said. He worked from 9 o'clock until 12. He swept beneath all of the machines and even removing boxes and barrels and other debris stored next to the women's toilet. He swept under Mary Phagan's machine and under the lathe used by Barrett. The area that he swept is as big as the court room, he said.

"Was it your duty to sweep this room?" asked Attorney Arnold.

"It was my duty to sweep part of it, where the concrete floor is." That, he said is little less than half of the total area.

"Why did you go on and sweep the wood floor when you were supposed to sweep only the concrete floor? Did you just start to sweeping and then couldn't stop?"

"No; sometimes I sweep the whole floor."

"Who told you to sweep this part?"

"Nobody."

"A negro was paid to sweep this, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"Wasn't it a negro's duty to sweep that same place that same day?"

"No, the negro usually swept it on Saturday."

"Were you paid by the hour or by the piece?"

"By the hour."

In sweeping this floor, said Stanford, he saw a few paint spots near the entrance of the women's dressing room, and also near the door of the room where lacquer is kept.

"Will you swear that there were not half a dozen other spots in that room, of one kind or another?"

"Yes."

Mrs. George W. Jefferson was called to the stand by the defense as an employe of the National Pencil factory. She was in the factory on April 25 and again on April 28.

She passed through the metal room on the 25th to the polishing room and didn't notice any blood spots, but did see spots on the floor there Monday. She described the blood spots.

She works in the polishing room on the same floor with the metal room in the polishing room about 50 feet from the blood spots, on a post a number of pieces of twine could usually be hung.

The color of the blood spots was dark, she said; but there was some whitish stuff scattered over them, looking like cord. Solicitor Dorsey asked the witness if she had seen any cord like that in the factory.

"Yes," she said. It was similar to lengths of cord that hung on the post.

"How long have you been working in the polishing room?

"About five years."

"Are any paints kept in the polishing room?"

"Yes."

"Any red paints?"

"Yes."

"How many different shades of red paint are kept there?"

"Three—maroon, red, red line and bright red."

"Are you familiar with these paints?"

"Yes. I should be. I use them enough in polishing."

"Those are all the paints there?"

"Yes."

SPOT WAS NOT PAINT.

"Could you distinguish one of these paints from another?"

"Yes."

"Could you tell whether or not the red spot had been made by one of the paints used in the polishing room?"

"It was not one of the paints."

Attorney Rosser took up the cross-examination.

"How did you happen to discover these dary spots near the dressing room door?" he asked.

"Mr. Barrett and I discovered them together at about the same time."

"Did you discover them or did Barrett call your attention to them?"

"I had been over to Mary Phagan's machine and was on my way back to the polishing room where I worked when we saw the spot. I think Mr. Barrett saw it first."

"Barrett was going around looking for spots, huh?"

"He made a search of the metal room."

"The floor in the metal room is dirty and greasy, is it not?"

"Yes."

"There are a good many dark spots on it?"

"I've seen greasy spots, but no spots like the one by the dressing room door."

"Where were the paints kept?"

"In the polishing room."

"Were there no paints in the metal room?"

"No."

"After the coloring matter is mixed with the grease, it is difficult to tell the color, is it not?"

"I never tried that."

"Did the white stuff hide the red spot?"

"No."

"How many other red spots did you find around the metal room?"

"I didn't find any others."

"You say you knew Mary Phagan?"

"Yes, for about a year."

SPOT CHIPPED UP LATER.

"How much of that white stuff was there?"

"It covered a place about as big as my fan." The witness exhibited a palm leaf fan of ordinary size.

"This spot later was chipped up, was it not?"

"Yes."

"Come down," said Mr. Rosser.

Solicitor Dorsey told her to wait.

"Where are the pencils painted?" inquired the solicitor.

"On the third floor."

"Where else are the paints used?"

"Nowhere, except on the third floor and in the polishing room on the second floor."

"After the paints are carried into the polishing room, is there ever any occasion to take them out to the metal room?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Dorsey sat down as if he had finished with the witness, and Mr. Rosser arose again.

"Mrs. Jefferson, these cords are scattered around all over the building, are they not?" inquired Mr. Rosser.

"No, sir, they are not supposed to be."

"Well, where are they kept?"

"On the post in the polishing room."

"Do you mean to say that there are none of these cords anywhere else about the building?"

CORDS IN POLISHING ROOM.

"As a matter of fact, don't they sometimes fall on the floor and aren't they sometimes carried in the sweepings to the basement?"

"I have never been to the basement have you?"

"No, sir."

"You don't know whether there are any cords down there or not?"

"No, sir."

"As a matter of fact, Mrs. Jefferson, haven't you within the past three months seen cords like this on the first floor of the factory?"

"No, sir, I have not."

"Well where else have you seen them beside the polishing room and the third floor?"

"Nowhere else."

Mr. Rosser sat down, and Mr. Dorsey questioned the witness.

"Do they have any need for cords in the basement?"

"None that I know of."

HASLETT ON STAND.

City Detective B. B. Haslett was called to the stand.

He told of going to Frank's house Monday morning at 7 o'clock to get him to go to the police station. Answering questions put by Solicitor Dorsey, he said that Frank was not arrested at this time, and was kept at detective headquarters only two or three hours.

Haslett said that they told Frank at his house that Chief Lanford wanted to see him. Frank appeared willing to accompany them and said: "Wait a minute and I'll be with you."

"Do you know when Frank was arrested?"

"No, sir, I do not."

"Whom did you see at detective headquarters that morning?"

"I saw Mr. Rosser and Mr. Haas, after I had gone up the street and come back."

Attorney Rosser cross-examined him.

"What time did you say you saw Mr. Haas and me there?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"I think it was about 8 o'clock, as nearly as I can recollect. I won't swear to the exact time."

Mr. Rosser asked for details about the detectives' actions at Frank's house, in an apparent effort to gain from Detective Haslett an admission that Frank was detained against his will.

"You know, don't you, that Frank didn't get away from detective headquarters until nearly 12, don't you?"

"No, I didn't stay there until 12."

"As a matter of fact, when you went out for Frank's house, it wasn't a question of whether or not he wanted to go, was it?"

"I don't suppose it was."

"Why did they send two of you?"

"Well, we generally work two together."

"Well, now, if Frank had resisted, Mr. Haslett, wouldn't you have brought him anyhow?"

"Yes, I guess we would."

UNDERTAKER TESTIFIES.

William A. Gheesling was called to the stand. He is an undertaker employed by P. J. Bloomfield.

Gheesling said that he went to the pencil factory at about 10 minutes to 4 o'clock on the morning that the body was discovered and found the body lying face down on the ground on the spot where it was later covered. The cord and the loop of an undergarment strip still were around the neck said he. He put the remains in a basket and carried them to the undertaking establishment, said he.

The impression that the loop and the cord had left on the neck of the body was an eighth of an inch deep, said he.

"What was the state of the body as regards rigor mortis?" asked the solicitor.

"Well, where are they kept?"

"On the post in the polishing room."

"Do you mean to say that there are none of these cords anywhere else about the building?"

The impression that the loop and the cord had left on the neck of the body was an eighth of an inch deep, said he.

"What was the state of the body as regards rigor mortis?" asked the solicitor.

"Only dust."

"Did you observe anything about her eyes?"

"There was a bruise over the right eye, said the witness. Evidently it had been made before death, for it had swelled.

"Were there any other wounds?" asked the solicitor.

"There were two on the back of the head."

DESCRIBES WOUNDS.

"If you made an examination, tell the jury about it."

"The skull was not fractured, said the witness, but the scalp was broken.

"Were there any marks on the body that could have been made by dragging?"

"There was a scar over each eye about the size of a dime."

"What was the condition of her nose?"

"I don't know."

"Were you present when Frank came to the undertaking place on the morning of Sunday, April 27?"

"Yes, I didn't know who Frank was until afterward, though."

"Did you observe his conduct particularly?"

"No."

"Can you say whether or not he looked upon the body?"

"I can't."

"Can you say what caused the death of Mary Phagan?"

Before the witness could reply, Attorney Rosser objected on the ground that the witness was not competent, not being a physician. Judge Roan held that the witness would have to qualify the witness as an expert. The solicitor withdrew his question with the comment that he would prove that by somebody else.

ROSSER TAKES WITNESS.

The witness was cross examined by Mr. Rosser.

"Was the blood under her hair damp?"

"I don't know."

"Well, if it had been damp an hour before you found the body, how long would you say that she had been ndead?"

"Between ten and fifteen hours, I would say. I don't go by the blood at all but by the status of the rigor mortis."

Attorney Rosser brought out from the witness the statement that rigor mortis sets in more quickly in certain cases than in others.

The witness admitted that he had little experience with strangulation cases. He had embalmed the bodies of a couple of men who were hanged. They were the only cases that he remembered. The witness discussed the action of blood after death. He said that no blood would come from a wound after the last heart action unless the bory was moved or it was forced out by some pressure.

Attorney oRsser brought out that in embalming the body, Gheesling removed half a gallon of blood and put in a gallon of embalming fluid. The witness was asked the formula of the embalming fluid that he used, and asked the court that he be not made to answer as the formula is one of his own which it has taken him fifteen years to perfect. The attorney withdrew the question.

BODY NOT MUTILATED.

The most interesting fact brought out by the cross examination of Gheesling was that Mary Phagans body was in no way mutilated. Attorney Rosser brought out that Dr. Hurt had probed under the girl's finger nails, but the witness did not know what he had found.

The witness stated that Dr. Hurt made a post mortem examination of the body on Monday. The witness convulsed the court when in reply to Rossers questions as to whether the girls underclothes had been torn or cut, he replied he was no dressmaker and couldn't tell.

Solicitor Dorsey asked the witness a final question:

"Had the girl lost much blood when you examined the body?"

"She couldn't have lost much,' was the answer.

Dr. Claude Smith was called as the next witness. He is a physician, and is the Atlanta city bacteriologist and chemist.

GROUND BLOOD ON CHIPS.

Solicitor Dorsey handed to the witness some chips.

"Dr. Smith, have you made any tests on these chips? If so, when?"

"These chips appear to be specimens that the detectives brought to me at my office."

"What was their condition?"

"They were very dirty, and there appeared to be a stain upon them. I examined several specimens, and on one specimen I found blood corpuscles."

The chips were the ones exhibited previously as having been dug from the metal room floor.

"Could you tell whether it was human blood or not?"

"I could not."

The shirt that the detectives claim to have found in the barel at Newt Lee's house was handed to the witnes. He was asked if he had seen it before. The shirt was one that the detectives had brought to him, said the witness. He started to repeat something that the detectives told him when they delivered the shirt, Mr. Roser objected. 'We don't care anything about that. We want to hear what you know of your own knowledge."

SHIRT NEVER WORN.

Solicitor Dorsey added, "Yes, just tell us what you found."

The witness stated that he examined the stains on the shirt. They reacted under the chemical test and also under the miscroscope. The witness examined the arm pits of the shirt, and it was his opinion that it hadn't been worn.

Mr. Rosser objected. "We don't want your opinion on common place subjects," said he. Dr. Smith continued that blood had been smeared on the inside of the shirt, and very little of it had penetrated outside. It was wadded together in some places as if it had been used to wipe something.

Again Mr. Roser objected, declaring that the witness merely was giving his own conclusion; that he was supposed to give the condition of the shirt, with*out surmise.*

Judge Roan advised the witness to state just what condition the shirt was in when it reached him.

Solicitor Dorsey declared that the shirt had been produced by Mr. Rosser for the defense, and that he wanted the witness to tell the jury what its condition was when the detectives gave it to him. Mr. Rosser rejoined: "I was just *showing what John Black had been do*ing—that he had been finding a shirt."

"Go ahead, doctor, and tell us about the condition of the shirt," said Mr. Dorsey.

"It was not soiled around the inside of the collar," said the witness. "It had every appearance of having been washed, but not worn." He said there was no odor to it.

Manifesting some impatience, Mr. Rosser jumped to his feet and asked that the witness' reply be stricken from the record. He declared that the witness was not discussing a scientific matter, but a common place one, which did not require expert testimony.

"All this stuff about odors is not a medical question," asserted Mr. Rosser. He ought to discuss only those things which the jury cannot determine for themselves."

Solicitor Dorsey asked the witness to tell the condition of the shirt and omit his conclusions.

There was no odor to the shirt. There was no evidence of soiling on the inside of the collar. Most of the blood was on the inside of the shirt.

ROSSER'S EXAMINATION.

*Mr. Roser cross-examined the wit*ness. He endeavored to make the witness admit that under some circumstances, such as the tail of the shirt being turned up, it could be soiled out*wardly yet appear to have been soiled* from the inside. Dr. Smith was inclined to dispute that theory. Again growing impatient, Mr. Rosser declared that the witness had been arguing ever since he came on the stand.

"You say there was no stain on the inside of the collar?"

"There was none."

"There was a pungent odor of blood, wasn't there?"

"Yes, there was some odor from the blood."

"Then the blood odor might destroy the body odor, might it not?"

"Somewhat."

"You say the odor of the shirt was that of a garment that had been washed and was fresh?"

"If a person had just worn this shirt a short while, there wouldn't be much odor, would there?"

"Yes, there would be some odor."

"If he had put it right on and taken it right off, you still could detect it?"

Mr. Rosser counted out four chips in the pencil factory and gave them to the witness. Dr. Smith admitted that he could not tell on which one of the four chips he found the blood.

Dr. Smith contended that blood corpuscles could remain on the floor or piece of wood for years if they were not disturbed in any way. He said, however, that they dissolved rapidly when water was put with them.

He had not examined the blood on the chips for quantity, said the witness, but admitted that all of the corpuscles that he saw—some four or five—could have been left there from one drop of blood. He could only tell that it was the blood of a mammal.

BLOOD OF A MOUSE?

He admitted that the blood might have been from a mouse, but refused to state that it was not the blood of an animal. Some experts could tell the difference between human and brute blood, but he could not.

Dr. Smith was asked a number of questions relative to rigor mortis, which, said he, usually starts very soon after death. It was complete in a number of instances in about ten hours, he said.

Mr. Rosser attempted repeatedly to make the witness say that a person taking off the shirt could have folded it so that the different blood spots would have been distributed upon it as they appeared in court; but the witness contended that it was hardly possible. Some of the blood on the inside of the shirt was only six inches from the arm pits, he said.

E. F. Holloway, watchman at the National Pencil factory, was called to the stand. In reply to questions by Solicitor Dorsey, he said that he worked in the pencil factory on the Saturday of the murder, from 6:29 a. m. until 11:45, and that among his duties was the supervision of the elevator.

"What do you do when you leave, usually?" asked the solicitor. "What did you do regarding the elevator when you left on Saturday?

"I had cut two plans for White and Denham, and I started the elevator to the third floor, where they were working."

Solicitor Dorsey addressed the court. "I want to say right now that I have been entrapped by this witness straightout."

The solicitor addressed this question to the witness after taking some affidavits and papers from his table:

"On May 12, 1913, in the presence of E. S. Smith, stenographer, Detectives Starnes and Campbell ,and myself, didn't you say regarding the power box that enables you to run the elevator, that you kept it locked all the time?"

"I said I left it locked Friday night."

"Where did you leave the elevator Friday night?"

"I left it on the second floor."

"Was it there when you left the building that Friday night?"

"Yes."

"On Saturday ,where was the elevator when you left?"

SWITCH BOX UNLOCKED.

"I did some sawing for Mr. White and Mr. Denham and sent it up and left the switch box unlocked Saturday."

"Didn't you say you never heard of the insurance company ordering the switch box kept open all the time, one day in my office? And don't you know that you said Mr. Dorsey had instructed you to keep it locked all the time? And isn't it a fact that eh ebox was locked Saturday morning at 11:45 when you left the building?"

"It was not."

"Why then, did you tell me it was?"

"I forgot."

"What was it Frank said to Newt Lee Friday night—you heard what he said, didn't you?"

"I didn't hear him say anything to Newt Lee."

Solicitor Dorsey picked up an affidavit.

"You signed your name to this paper, didn't you?"

"The witness replied "Yes."

"Why did you say the box was always kept locked?"

"I forgot."

Holloway proceeded to testify that he saw Frank leave the pencil factory at 9:45 a. m. Sturdaya. April 26, to go to Montag Brothers.

"Did you ever see Gantt speak to Mary Phagan while he was working in the factory?"

"No."

The witness had misunderstood the question, he said, asking that it be repeated. The lawyers for the defense interposed that he was hard of hearing. Mr. Dorsey repeated the question.

"I saw him talking to her frequently," and where?"

"Around the time clock, where I would stop to register."

"What is the condition of the stairs that lead from the ground floor to the back of the basement?"

"It is good," answered the witness.

"Are these stairs nailed up? If so, how long have they been nailed up?"

"All this year."

"Were you there Monday morning after the murder?"

"I was."

"What do you know about the insurance people going through the building?"

"I saw a crowd of men in the basement."

"Do you know when that area down there was cleaned up?"

"About two weeks after the murder."

That closed the direct examination, and the witness was turned over to Attorney Arnold.

"Mr. Holloway, all Saturday morning the front doors were unlocked, were they not?" began Mr. Arnold.

"Yes."

"When those men, Denham and White, wanted you to saw those boards for them, you had to use the motor, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"That's the same motor that runs the elevator, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"And you left the switch-box open when you left, did you?"

"Yes."

ELEVATOR OPEN.

"Then anybody could run the elevator after that?"

"Anybody—yes."

"Mr. Holloway, isn't the floor of the metal department dirty and greasy?"

"There's not a worse one in town."

"During the three years he has worked in the pencil factory, said the witness, the floor of the metal room has not been scoured once.

"Mr. Holloway, spots are not uncommon on this floor, are they?"

"No, sir."

"Have you ever seen spots that looked like blood, around the ladies' toilet?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever see the spots that Barrett claims to have discovered, on the floor of the metal room?"

"I saw them on Monday."

"This man Barret discovered mighty near everything that was found in the building, didn't he?"

"So he claims," said the watchman.

"Did you ever see Frank speak to Mary Phagan?"

"Did you see Newt Lee when he got there Monday?"

"Yes, he was just going out with the detectives."

"Who came next?"

"Either White or Denham—I don't know which. He went upstairs."

"Who was the next to come in?"

"Alonzo Mann, the office boy."

"Who next?"

"Mr. Rosser, I think."

"What did he do?"

"He opened the safe, got out the books and went back."

"Who came next?"

"Mattie Smith. She worked there."

"Who came next?"

"I don't remember."

"Didn't you see Corinthia Hall and another young woman come in?"

"I saw them at Hunter and Broad streets after I left the factory. Miss Emma asked if there was anything I could find the key to the office, where I was left because there is a spring lock on the power box?"

"That's right," the witness said.

After the direct statement of Solicitor Dorsey tendered in evidence that portion of the stenographic record of Holloway's statement in which he referred to the power box, saying that the witness did not admit saying that he locked the box on Saturday. The attorney for the defense contended that he did admit saying that he had locked the box, although he was mistaken about it.

The witness was called back to the stand, and then he clearly admitted that he had said to the solicitor that he had told him that he locked the box on Saturday.

Solicitor Dorsey then declared that he still wanted to put the stenographic record in record as it was the highest and best evidence of the witness' contradictory statement by which he, Dorsey, had been entropped. To avoid a tedious argument, said the solicitor, he would waive the point inasmuch as he had secured the witness' admission that he had contradicted himself.

Solicitor Dorsey called for Mrs. Arthur White as the next witness, but Judge Roan declared it was time to adjourn. Before adjourning, however, the court asked if any of the jurors had any complaint to make of treatment they were receiving.

Juror Winburn said they had had a complaint relative to their rooms, but he understood the matter would be rectified by the sheriff.

a machine with a hammer. I heard the hammer distinctly when I reached the fourth floor. They quit work when I came up."

"How many times did you have to ask Mr. Frank if White and Denham were at work?"

"I had to repeat my question."

The witness testified that while she was upstairs, about 1 o'clock, Frank came up and told her that she would have to leave then if she expected to get out before 2 o'clock, because he was going out and intended to lock the doors behind him.

"What time did you leave?"

"Some time about 1 o'clock."

"Was it before or after 1?"

"It was before 1."

"How do you know it was before 1?"

"Because I was in McDonald's furniture store at 1 o'clock."

"And how far is that from the pencil factory?"

"Five or six blocks."

"How much before 1 do you say it was?"

"About ten minutes."

Mrs. White said that Frank preceded her down the stairs. Sh eleft the building.

SAW A NEGRO ALSO.

When she went by the office on her way out, Frank was sitting by a table in th eouter office, with his coat off.

"What was he doing at the table?"

"I suppose he was writing."

"What led you to believe he was writing?"

"Well, he was sitting there."

"As you came down the steps from the second floor did you see anybody?"

"Yes, a negro."

"Where was he?"

"Sitting on a box to the bottom of the stairway leading from the second floor."

"Did you see his coat?"

"No."

"Did you see his hat?"

"No."

Solicitor Dorsey walked up to the witness stand with Mary Phagan's parasol and handing it to Mrs. White asked her to point out the spot on the diagram where the negro was sitting. She pointed to a place in the lower hallway, near the stairway. The solicitor also asked her to point out the place on the fourth floor where Denham and White were working. She put the end of the pointer on a place several feet toward the front of the building from the top of the stairway on the fourth floor.

"Could they see down the stairway from where they were working?"

"No, sir."

ROSSER TAKES WITNESS.

Mr. Rosser took up the cross-examination of the witness.

"You left the factory about 1 o'clock, Mrs. White?"

"Yes."

"You are not sure as to the exact time?"

"No, sir."

"How long after 1 o'clock was it that you reached the furniture store?"

"I don't know exactly."

"You won't say positively that it was ten minutes to 1 when they left the factory?"

"No, sir, not positively."

"It was somewhere about 1 o'clock?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where is that furniture store, and how far from the factory?"

"It is on Mitchell street beyond the Terminal station."

"Did you walk there directly from the factory?"

"Yes, sir."

Mr. Rosser stopped to refer to a statement which the witness furnished to the defense some time ago.

"You say it was about 1 o'clock when you left the factory, but you didn't look at the clock?"

"No, sir, it was about 1. I did not look at the clock."

"You got to the factory the first time about 11:30 o'clock?"

"Yes."

"And you say you found there two men whose names you didn't know, Mr. Frank and the stenographer, Miss Hall?"

"Yes."

"You didn't see the office boy, Alonzo Mann?"

"No."

"You went in and sat down in Frank's office?"

"Yes."

"He was talking to two men?"

"Yes."

"After he had finished talking to the two men he came over to you, did he not?"

"Yes."

"You told him you wanted to see Mr. White?"

"Yes."

"Did you see your brother, Wade Campbell, or your father, there?"

FRANK SENT WORD.

"No, sir."

"They both work there, do they not?"

"Yes."

"Frank sent word up to White that you were downstairs and wanted to see him, did he not?"

"Yes."

"By whom did he send this word?"

"By Mrs. Emma Freeman."

The witness said that Mrs. Emma Freeman formerly was Miss Emma Clark, and had married just the day before.

"How long was it before White came down?"

"About five minutes."

"Where was it you talked with him?"

"Outside of the office, near the time clock."

"How long did you talk with him there?"

"About fifteen minutes."

"Who came up while you were talking to your husband?"

"Cornelia Hall, Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Mae Barrett."

The witness added that these three came down the stairs. "Mrs. Barrett's daughter also came in, coming upstairs," she continued.

"Miss Hall and Mrs. Freeman."

"Who next?"

"Mrs. Barrett and her daughter."

"You left last?"

"Yes sir."

"What time was it when you left?"

"About 10 minutes to 12 o'clock."

"You couldn't say accurately as to the time you left?"

"No, sir."

"You went somewhere up town—we don't care where—did you not?"

"Yes sir."

"How long did you stay?"

"About 40 minutes."

"And you came back to the factory about 12:30?"

"Yes, sir it was 12:30."

"How do you know?"

"I looked at the clock that time."

"Where did you say Frank was when you came back?"

"He was standing in front of the safe in the outer office."

WHAT WAS FRANK DOING?

"What was he doing? Did he look like he was taking something out of the safe, or putting something into the safe?"

"He didn't appear to be doing anything."

"Was the safe door open?"

"Yes."

"When the safe door is open, it closes up against the inside office door, does it not?"

"Yes."

"When you spoke to Frank, where were you?"

"I was inside the office door and just behind Mr. Frank."

"And he appeared startled?"

"Yes sir."

"Acted as a person does when some one comes up on them unexpectedly?"

"Yes, sir; that's what I thought."

"You asked Frank if White still was upstairs?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did Frank say?"

"He told me that he was, and suggested that I go on upstairs, which I did."

"After a while Frank came up and asked your husband and Harry Denham if they had finished their work?"

"I don't know, sir. I didn't hear him ask that."

"You heard him say to your husband if your wife wants to get out before 3 o'clock she'd better go pretty soon?"

"I'm not sure as to the exact words he used."

WHAT FRANK SAID.

Here Mr. Rosser read from the statement which had been furnished to him by the witness: "If your wife wants to get out before I go to lunch," read Mr. Rosser, "she'd better get out in a few minutes, for I'm going as soon as I get my hat and coat."

Mrs. White said that was about the language used by Frank.

"You remained a few minutes after Frank went down?"

"Yes."

"And when you came down to the office floor, you saw Frank at a table in the outer office, writing?"

"Yes."

"You then went on down the steps to the street floor?"

"Yes."

"As you came down, just where did you see the negro?"

"Between the stairway and the door."

"Just what do you mean by between the stairway and the door? Between the front of the stairway and the door?"

"Yes."

"How far from the front of the stairs?"

"About five or six feet."

Attorney Rosser asked the witness to point out, on a blue print of the plant which he produced, the spot where she saw the negro. He brought from the witness a statement that she had talked with Solicitor Dorsey about two weeks after the tragedy.

Attorney Frank Hooper took up the redirect examination.

"The negro was not sitting against the wall, was he?"

"No."

DARLEY TESTIFIES.

The witness was excused. Solicitor Dorsey called Arthur White, who did not answer. He called Arthur Denham, who did not answer. Then he called N. V. Darley, who took the stand.

Mr. Darley stated that he has charge of the employes at the National Pencil factory. His immediate superior is Sig Montag. Darley is a co-worker and rated equally with Frank. Mr. Darley stated that he was in the factory on Saturday, April 26; that he left there about 9:40 a. m., and that he returned there the following day at 8:18 or 8:20 o'clock in the morning, and as he came in Mr. Frank came up.

"Did you observe anything unusual about Frank?" asked the solicitor.

"Not at first, but when we got into the elevator and he reached for the rope, I noticed that his hands were trembling. His hands still were trembling when he started to nail up the door in the basement. I took the hammer from him because his hands were trembling and he was nervous, and also because I could handle the hammer better."

The statement that he thought he could handle the hammer better was ruled out after some discussion.

Darley said that he could not remember very well the conversations that morning. Asked specifically if he remembered Frank saying anything about coffee, he said:

"Yes, as we were starting away from the factory, he said that he had been called from home without any breakfast or coffee, and that they had taken him straight down to the undertaker's into a dark room where they suddenly flashed on a light and he instantly saw the corpse, and that he was nervous. He said that he wouldn't have been nervous if he'd had a cnance to get some breakfast."

The witness continued that he remembered that at 10 o'clock Frank telephoned to his home about getting his breakfast ready.

Darley was asked about the elevator. The key of the lock to the power box was in place, but the box was not locked that morning. He didn't know where the key was. He saw Newt Lee that morning, he said, in answer to a question, and Lee seemed to be composed.

"What did Frank say with reference to the staple and the hasp?" asked the solicitor.

"Frank referred to the easy manner in which they could be pulled out and seemed to think that the crime was committed in the basement."

The witness' statement that Frank "seemed to think" the crime was committed in the basement, was ruled out.

Darley said that the staple in the back door looked like it had been pulled out before. It was black, he said, and usually when a staple is pulled out the first time it looks rather red.

"You said Frank intimated that the murder occurred in the basement. What were his words?" inquired the solicitor.

"I don't remember."

FRANK TAXED OF NERVOUSNESS.

"The day after this talk about coffee, did you talk with Frank about coffee again or his condition on that day?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"About the same thing."

"Did he say next day anything about being nervous?"

"Yes."

"How many times did you hear him explain, or try to explain, his nervousness?"

Attorney Rosser objected. The solicitor reframed his question.

"How many times did you hear him talk about the murder?"

"Numerous times. I don't remember the exact number."

Mr. Dorsey asked permission to read to the jury a statement that Darley previously had made to him. Attorney Rosser objected. The solicitor contented himself with showing the statement to Mr. Darley to refresh his memory. He asked Darley this question after the witness had scanned the paper.

"Now what was more on Frank's mind—the murder or the explanation of his nervousness?"

Attorney Rosser jumped to his feet. "That won't do!" he exclaimed. Judge Roan sustained the objection.

"I think I should be permitted to read this statement to the jury, your honor," said Mr. Dorsey, addressing the court. A heated colloquy between attorneys followed. Attorney Arnold, seated, said: "He hasn't made his usual showing, your honor, that he has been entrapped."

"I don't hesitate to do it," replied Mr. Dorsey.

"You don't hesitate to do anything," said Mr. Arnold.

It appeared that Judge Roan ruled against reading the statement.

"How much of his body shook?" the solicitor inquired.

Darley answered that he couldn't remember.

"Tell the truth about this statement," admonished the solicitor.

Darley replied: "My words there are that he shook all over."

"Is that true or not?"

Mr. Rosser objected. The solicitor had no right to cross-question his own witness, said Mr. Rosser. Judge Roan sustained Mr. Rosser.

"When and where was it that you first saw Frank shaking all over?"

HAND WAS TREMBLING.

"When we were going down in the elevator." He reached up to pull the rope, and his hand was trembling. I can't say positively about his body, though."

"Could Frank or not have driven the nails in the back door?"

"I guess he could, but I thought I could do it better."

The solicitor showed Mr. Darley his statement and asked "What do you say now?"

"Just the same," was the reply.

"How did Frank look Sunday morning?"

"Pale."

"Can you or not say that he was upset?"

Attorney Rosser objected. "The solicitor can't say 'upset,' your honor." "Oh, yes, I can," retorted the solicitor. "I guess the jury knows what 'upset' means. I'll cite you some authorities on that."

Solicitor Dorsey read several authorities tending to show that his questions were proper. One of these set out that it could be shown that a person was nervous, worried, excited, preoccupied, pale, and that it was proper to develop evidence as to his movements, appearance, behavior and bearing.

Judge Roan interrupted, declaring: "That doesn't touch the point we have up here now, Mr. Dorsey. The witness says that the defendant was nervous. He must show how and why he was nervous."

QUESTION IS ALLOWED.

"Why does your honor select the word 'nervous'?" inquired the solicitor. "'Upset' is a term which is well understood by the members of this jury and I dare say by every one in this court room."

"Go ahead and ask him the question," directed the court.

"Mr. Darley," commanded the solicitor, "just state to this jury whether or not Leo M. Frank appeared upset on that Monday morning, and if so why and how."

The witness replied that he wouldn't say as to that.

"Now, look here," shouted the solicitor, as he advanced toward the witness with the latter's written statement.

Attorney Rosser, jumping to his feet, declared "Your honor, he can't do that. He can't smart at this witness. He mustn't talk to this witness in that manner. This is his own witness, and he can't dispute him."

"Your honor," answered the solicitor, "I've got a right to show by this witness Frank's conduct and manner. I want to read you another decision, to show you that I've got that right."

The solicitor read from a decision which was to the effect that it could be shown whether a person accused had appeared wild, whether he had shown satisfaction or dissatisfaction, and several other specific terms of conduct.

"Let him get the law!" shouted Mr. Rosser.

Before Solicitor Dorsey could send for the laws, Judge Roan addressing the solicitor said: "I don't need the laws. I understand perfectly what can be done. You can't 'wild' and stop there without explaining how and why."

Addressing the witness, Solicitor Dorsey asked:

"Say whether or not on Sunday morning, April 27, Leo M. Frank looked upset. If so, why. State the reasons to the jury."

Darley answered that Frank did appear upset. Solicitor Dorsey submitted the witness' previous statement to him, and after he had read a paragraph

WITNESS SWEARS NEGRO WAS IN FACTORY AT ABOUT 1 O'CLOCK

indicated by the solicitor, the solicitor asked:

"Have you answered those questions now as you did before?"

"I object, your honor," said Mr. Rosser. "He can't ask the witness that question."

Judge Roan sustained Mr. Rosser.

FRANK "DONE UP."

The solicitor then put this question to the witness:

"Do you state whether or not Leo M. Frank was or was not completely done up? Whichever way you state, give your reasons."

"Wait a minute!" spoke up Mr. Arnold. "'Done up' might mean that he was dead. It might mean anything else. We object to that."

"I'll risk the jury on the meaning of that," said the solicitor.

Attorney Rosser interrupted.

"Your honor," said he, "will decide on risking the jury—not my friend Dorsey."

The court permitted the solicitor to ask the question.

Darley replied: "He was partially done up. That's as far as I can state now."

"Why do you say 'partially'?" asked the solicitor.

"Well, Mr. Frank was able to attend to some business around the factory, and if he had been completely done up he couldn't have done that."

"Did you take an automobile ride with Frank Sunday morning?"

"Yes. I went in an automobile with him to the station house."

"Where did you sit in the automobile?"

"On the front seat beside Rogers, the driver."

"Where did Frank sit?"

"He sat on my left knee."

"Well, what was his condition then?"

"He was trembling and shaking."

"Was Newt Lee in the automobile?"

"Yes."

"Well, was Newt Lee composed or nervous?"

LEE'S TESTIMONY VALUELESS?

Attorney Rosser objected. The court previously had ruled out such a question. Judge Roan asked the solicitor if he insisted upon putting the question. Both Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Hooper addressed the court, declaring the state's willingness for everything to go out of the record about Newt Lee.

Attorney Rosser insisted that whatever was to be stricken from the record must be stated specifically. Judge Roan directed the solicitor to sit down and draw up what he wished withdrawn from the record. The solicitor declared it would be impossible. It would be an interminable job, said he.

Attorney Rosser sought to explain to the court what questions with reference to Lee had been ruled out previously, stating that they applied to the negro's condition—whether he was nervous or not. Solicitor Dorsey remarked that the state was perfectly willing for all references to Lee being nervous to be stricken from the record.

"Your honor," said Mr. Rosser, "it's not a favor that they are conferring upon me, but it has at last dawned upon them that it is illegal."

LEE'S TESTIMONY STANDS.

Attorney Hooper replied, addressing the court. "I don't want it to go down in records, your honor, what my friend Rosser has just said in regard to it taking a long time for anything to dawn upon me. Mr. Rosser's statement was one of criticism, and I don't care for him to pass upon how long it takes anything to soak into my head."

Mr. Hooper's remarks were in the nature of a rebuke to Mr. Rosser. Nothing was done, however, by the court, and the trial proceeded. Mr. Dorsey seemed oblivious of Mr. Rosser's criticism.

Judge Roan ruled out all references to Newt Lee's demeanor during the trial of the case. This was done at the solicitor's instance, by agreement of both sides. All questions which brought answers regarding Newt Lee's demeanor, and all answers to that effect, were ordered stricken from the records. The trial went on.

"Did you see the financial sheet Monday morning?"

"Yes. Frank picked it up and said something about it."

"After Gantt was discharged, did he come to the factory?"

"Yes, once or twice."

"Did you see Frank examine the financial sheet Sunday?"

"I think so. I know I looked at it."

"When did Mr. Haas, the agent for the insurance company, come down to the factory?"

"About May 1."

"When was the factory cleaned up after that?"

"May 3."

The solicitor pointed to the spot on the diagram where the bloody stick is supposed to have been found, and asked if that area was cleaned up. Orders for a general cleaning had been given, answered the witness. He didn't know said that he was shown six or eight hairs on a lathe which is about twenty feet from Mary's machine. It was difficult to tell the color of the hair, he said.

"Barrett had been doing most of the discovering around the factory, hadn't he?" asked Mr. Arnold.

The state objected. Attorney Arnold said: "We want to show that Barrett is a monomaniac on this subject; that he buys all the extras, and is worsing for a reward." After some discussion, the state's objection was sustained and the question was ruled out.

"Who showed you the hair, then?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Quinn, Barrett and The Journal reporter," answered the witness.

Mr. Arnold asked about the blood spots.

The witness described them as looking to him like blood spots, with a white smear over them.

"Did Barrett say he was working for a reward?" asked Arnold.

The state objected and Attorney Arnold said: "We simply want to show, your honor, that Christopher Columbus wasn't in it with this Barrett." The state's objection was sustained by Judge Roan.

"Were you there when Barrett said he found a piece of pay envelope under Mary Phagan's machine?" asked Mr. Arnold.

PAY ENVELOPES COMMON.

The witness said he was not there. The pay envelope was shown to the witness, who in answer to questions said that about 175 similar envelopes were used in the factory every week. Most of them were thrown around. It was a rule that if an inaccuracy was found by an employe in his pay envelope after he left the factory, he could not recover anything.

Pay envelopes generally were thrown away on the second floor, he said. Attorney Arnold asked the witness if he remembered seeing Frank take out the slip from the time clock Sunday morning. He did, said the witness.

He looked over Frank's shoulder at the slip, and then thought himself that it was incorrect. The time slip was exhibited to him and he showed how Frank ran his finger down the side on which the numbers were.

The witness stated that there were no breaks although there were lapses of time, and that because there were no breaks he at first glance thought that the clock had been punched regularly and correctly.

EXPLAINS TIME SLIP.

At this point Juror Johenning said that he wanted to ask a question. The juror asked the witness to go further into his explanation about the time slip. Standing by the jury box with the slip in his hand, Darley went over the matter again, detailing how the lapses in time occurred without a break in the space.

Attorney Arnold asked the witness if the financial sheet for that week had been made out in Frank's own writing. The witness said yes.

Attorney Hooper objected to any questions about the financial sheet, saying that it would be the best evidence about itself.

Attorney Arnold retorted: "You needn't be afraid we won't introduce evidence."

This was the first intimation from the defense as to whether it would introduce evidence.

Attorney Arnold had the witness go into the different details covered by the financial sheet, the purpose being to show the amount of work, expert work, to make out the sheet. Darley said that it required such expert work that there hadn't been a financial sheet made out since Frank left the factory, although it was the custom to have them made every week.

Darley continued that Frank usually started on the financial sheet about 2:30 o'clock on Saturday and finished it about 5:30 or later. When shown the sheet, he declared that it was all in Frank's handwriting. No work had been done on it when he left the factory at 9:40 o'clock.

Mr. Arnold asked the witness how the handwriting by Frank on the financial sheet in evidence, compared with Frank's handwriting on previous financial sheets.

WANTED COMPARISON.

Solicitor Dorsey objected on the ground that the previous sheets themselves were the best possible evidence, and that Darley was no handwriting expert and therefore was not competent. The solicitor read a section of the Georgia code to support that view.

There followed a twenty-minute argument on this question, in which all four of the principal attorneys at various times took the floor. Attorney Hooper, in one of his arguments, said that the defense had no right to show this sheet to the jury without showing previous sheets so that the jury itself could compare them. "You need have no fear, Mr. Hooper," said Mr. Arnold. "They'll be introduced at the proper time."

At the conclusion of this questioning, Judge Roan withheld his decision until he could look up authorities in the matter.

Attorney Arnold questioned the witness on the various items in the financial sheet and the calculations. Darley said that it was necessary in computing the sheet to go into each individual item on the sheet.

At the conclusion of this questioning, the solicitor asked, "Are you through with him, Mr. Arnold?"

"Oh, no, no," replied Mr. Arnold. "We haven't got a good start with him yet."

"On Sunday you were in the pencil factory, were you not?" continued Mr. Arnold, addressing the witness.

"Yes."

"Detectives Starnes was there, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"He went through the factory with you, didn't he?"

"Yes."

"Forty or fifty people were in that building on Sunday, were there not?"

"Not Sunday. My recollection is that there were six or eight there."

"Did you go down into the basement?"

"Yes."

"There was a great deal of excitement, wasn't there?"

"Yes."

"You were excited, weren't you?"

EVERYBODY EXCITED.

"Yes."

"Everybody was excited?"

Solicitor Dorsey objected. Attorney Arnold argued the point. The defense had the right to show the state of mind of everybody else in the factory, in order to compare it with Frank's conduct. He spoke of Frank's having missed his breakfast and his coffee that morning, and remarked, "Everybody that drinks coffee knows that when an habitual user misses his usual drink he is unnerved." The policemen were excited, said he. "I think I have the right to show that Frank manifested merely natural excitement. This young man was superintendent of the factory, and a little girl had been murdered there. It was no more than natural to assume that he had been perturbed. The state seems to be basing its whole prosecution on whether or not Frank was excited on the morning the body was discovered. This is a question which never should have been admitted to the case."

Attorney Rosser followed Mr. Arnold with argument upon the point. "Let me tell you what I saw once," said he. "We had a riot here some years ago. I saw 200 men and they were all excited. Now suppose they tried me for lunacy and told of my excitement—said that I made a fool of myself. Would you hold that I couldn't say that anybody else around me was excited?"

Solicitor Dorsey argued the point from the state's standpoint. "They've gone on record that you couldn't take up the deportment of Lee and compare it with that of Frank," said he. "They objected to our doing that, and they got it into the records. I want to know how far this is going to continue. Are you going to open the flood gates and show the deportment of every man who went into the factory, when the only question at issue is the deportment of Frank?"

Attorney Arnold asked Darley what was the condition of the other people around the factory that morning.

Solicitor Dorsey immediately renewed

Mrs. Callie Scott Appelbaum Attends Trial of Leo Frank; Believes in His Innocence

MRS. CALLIE SCOTT APPELBAUM.

A woman sat among the spectators at the Frank trial Thursday afternoon, a pretty blue-eyed woman neatly clad in a white shirtwaist and black skirt.

"Four months ago," she was thinking, "I was in the position of that boyish-limbed youth over there. Four months ago, I, too, was accused of murder, was on trial for my life. Four months ago men and women came to stare at me, even as I am staring at him now."

The woman was Mrs. Callie Scott Applebaum, who was freed last spring of the charge of slaying her husband in the Dakota hotel.

"This is the second time in my life," she said Thursday afternoon, "that I have been in a court room. The first time was when I myself was on trial, so of course I know just how it feels. Believe me, I can sympathize with Mr. Frank, and I do."

Mrs. Applebaum says she has been living in Atlanta for several months, working at a beauty parlor, and that Thursday was the first time she was able to get somebody else to take her place so she could come to the trial.

"I believe in his innocence, for a man like that could never do the thing he is accused of."

All through the afternoon Mrs. Applebaum sat in the court room, her intent expression showing that she was greatly interested in every phase of the testimony.

"Yes," she said, as court adjourned for the afternoon, "I am coming again just as soon as I can. You see, it is much better to be a spectator than a prisoner."

his objection.

Attorney Rosser declared: "This jury won't know but that Frank was the sole man who was nervous that morning. The jury won't know that my friend Starnes, sleuth that he is, and that son of the Emerald isle, Pat Campbell, were excited when they looked on that girl's body. Are you going to take this young man and show how it affected him, and close the mouths of all these other witnesses?"

ROSSER'S WARNING.

"Your honor, I want to impress on you that a misstep here would vitiate this whole trial."

A moment later Mr. Rosser repeated this statement—taken to mean conclusively that the defense is laying its foundations for an appeal.

Solicitor Dorsey arose.

"If there is any doubt in your honor's mind," said the solicitor, "about this matter, I have here a number of decisions. This question they are seeking to put is simply a dragnet proposition. They want to run them all in on it." The solicitor read two or three decisions to sustain his contention.

"Wouldn't it b emonstrous ,your honor, to go outside of this trial and this evidence and run in everybody and anybody to show that they may or may not have been nervous. The one point to be made before this jury is as to whether or not the defendant was nervous. At the instance of the defense, the state already has agreed and your honor has ruled that a similar question applying to Newt Lee should be withdrawn from the record."

"I adhere to my former ruling," said Judge Roan.

Attorney Arnold arose.

"I purpose to prove by this witness, your honor, that he himself was excited and nervous, and that the others present were nervous and excited."

"Perhaps that's a different question," said the judge. "I thought you wanted to go out and bring in others who were not present. If you want to show that he and others were excited from the same cause that mibht be a different proposition."

Judge Roan asked the solicitor if he renewed his objection.

"I most certainly do, your honor," answered the solicitor.

Judge Roan announced that he would hold to his former ruling.

Resuming his cross-examination of the witness, Attorney Arnold asked:

"Isn't it a fact that there are a good many spots on the metal room floor, and that you have seen spots there from time to time?"

"Yes, I've seen spots all over the factory."

"Red spots and dark spots?"

"Yes."

ABOUT RED SPOTS.

"How long have you worked in factories?"

"Twenty-four years."

"Large numbers of women worked in those factories?"

"Yes."

"Isn't it a usual and frequent fact that blood spots are found around the women's dressing rooms and closets?"

"This is a well known fact?"

"Yes."

"You've see such spots at this factory?"

"Yes."

"You nailed up the back door. Why did you do that?"

"Because the staple had been pulled out."

"You did so because you had had more experience in that line than Frank, did you not?"

"Yes, that was one reason, and Frank was nervous, too."

"Frank wore a brown suit on Saturday?"

"Yes."

"And on Monday he wore the same brown suit?"

"Yes."

"Were you accustomed to see him on Sundays?"

"No."

"Then you couldn't tell what kind of clothes he wore usually on Sundays?"

"No."

"He wore a different one the Sunday you saw him at the factory?"

"Yes."

"But you don't know about his Sunday clothes?"

"No."

"Well, on Monday did you observe any spots on the brown suit worn by Frank then and on Saturday?"

"No, sir."

FRANK NOT SCRATCHED.

"Did you observe any scratches or bruises on his face or hands?"

"I didn't see any."

"Saturday morning when you came to the factory, Frank was there was he not?"

"Yes."

"Whom else did you find there?"

"Mattie Smith, one of the employes, was in the office. She came for her own and her sister-in-law's pay. She found that her sister-in-law's time was wrong. Frank told her to wait a little while and he would straighten it out, that he didn't want to get his cash out of balance. The girl gave me back the money when she found it was wrong. The mistake was made on account of the similarity of the two girls' names. Mattie Smith's sister-in-law was named Mamie Smith, and Mamie's pay had been put in Mattie's envelope. Frank corrected this mistake. Then the girl called my attention to the fact that we had promised to raise Mamie's pay, but hadn't done it. I told her we would straighten this out next week."

WHY MATTIE SMITH CRIED.

"I asked her how her father was. She replied that 'He is dying, I think.' I assisted her from the office down the stairs to the street door. She was crying. She asked me if the office would aid her in the matter of funeral expenses of her father. I sought to console and cheer her. I told her we would do whatever we could for her, and advised her not to worry about her sister-in-law's time."

Attorney Arnold inquired: "What time was it when Mattie Smith left the factory?"

"About 9:20 o'clock," the witness answered.

"Then you went back upstairs to the office?"

"Yes."

"What time was it Frank went to Montag Brothers?"

"About 9:40 o'clock. We went out together. We stopped at a soda fountain a short distance up the street, and got a drink. Afterward Frank went on to Montag's, and I didn't see him again until next morning."

"Was the elevator locked or unlocked on Sunday morning?"

"It was unlocked, but the lock was in place."

"Could anybody have started the elevator?"

"Yes."

"Does the same motor that drives the elevator drive the saw?"

"Yes."

"Do both the elevator and the saw run at the same time?"

"Yes, unless the belt to the saw is thrown off."

"When the elevator is running, it makes a great deal of noise, does it not?"

ELEVATOR'S NOISE.

"Yes, it makes a great deal of noise, but not as loud when it starts as when it stops at the bottom."

"About these cords, Mr. Darley—they can be found all over the factory, can't they, from the basement to the top?"

"Yes, sir."

"They frequently are swept up into the trash, are they not?"

"Yes, sir, I often make complaints about that."

"A great deal of waste is gathered up in the factory, is it not?"

"Yes, sir, several truck loads every day."

"When was it you say the factory was cleaned up?"

"It was given a special cleaning on May 3, but it was given a general cleaning on the Tuesday after the murder."

"There are many crevices and corners that haven't been cleaned yet, aren't there?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long is the factory building?"

"Between 150 and 200 feet, I should say."

"And it's about 70 to 100 feet wide?"

"Yes, sir."

"The factory is an extremely dirty place, is it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"In some places the gum and dirt is about an inch thick, is it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"And it's about one-eighth of an inch thick in some places on the metal room floor?"

"Yes."

"Isn't it dark on the first floor and in the basement?"

"It is very dark in the basement, and quite dark on the first floor when the front doors are closed."

"Is it dark around the wall on the first floor near the radiator?"

"Yes, sir; especially so on cloudy days."

"What kind of a day was it on April 26?"

"It was very dark and misty all day."

"What was on the first floor on that day?"

"A dozen or more large empty boxes were piled there."

"There were plenty of places for a man to hide in those boxes, weren't there?"

"Yes, sir."

"There's not so much light on the second floor, between the time clocks and the metal room doors, is there?"

"No, sir."

"Well, how is it in the little walkway off to the left from the metal room?"

"It is very dark."

"From Frank's private office at the desk, you can't see the steps, can you?"

"No."

"How far is it from his office to the metal room?"

"About 100 feet."

"Can the doors to the metal room be locked?"

"No."

"Behind this dressing room, what is there?"

"It's used as a storeroom for worthless stock, and also there are three or four vats in there."

In answer to questions, the witness said that a person practically could have the run of the factory without being seen from Frank's office.

"How did you happen to go to Solicitor Dorsey's office?"

"Twice I was served with subpoenas and once he phoned for me."

"Did you know that he had no right to subpoena you?"

"Not then."

"Did you know that those subpoenas were not worth the pape rthey were written on?"

"I since have heard so."

"The first time you went to his office, who was there?"

"Chief Lanford, Mr. Stephens, Mr. Dorsey and the stenographer."

"Did they all ask you questions?"

"All but the stenographer. One of them would ask a question sometimes before I could finish my answer to another's question."

"Who was there the second time?"

"Mr. Dorsey, Detectives Starnes and Campbell and a stenographer. Then I was questioned only by Mr. Dorsey."

"Is Frank a man of a nervous temperament?"

FRANK'S NERVOUS TEMPERAMENT.

"Yes, whenever the smallest thing went wrong at the factory he would get very nervous and upset, and would go about rubbing his hands. I've seen him do it a thousand times."

The witness said that he considers his own nerves good; that he would take charge when Frank became nervous. Darley was shown the notes found by Mary Phagan's body. Scratch paper like that on which one of the notes was written was to be found generally through the factory, said he, as many of the tablets were used.

Order blank paper like that on which the second note was written often was thrown on the floor and swept up in the rubbish, he said. The witness said that despite orders, the time clock door was unlocked on Saturday, and that anyone who understood the clock could have made regular punches for a whole night within five minutes. Darley said that he had seen Wade Campbell, a man named Lynes, and a man Irby, at the factory on Saturday.

At this point, at 12:20 o'clock, Judge Roan announced recess of the court until 2 o'clock.

ROAN REVERSES RULING.

Immediately after convening court Friday afternoon Judge L. S. Roan announced that during the noon recess he had given due consideration to two points raised during the morning, on one of which he had ruled and on the other of which he had reserved his ruling.

At the morning session Solicitor Dorsey objected to a question put by the defense to Darley, saying that Darley could not testify as to whether or not the handwriting by Frank on the financial sheet produced in evidence was like that on previous financial sheets drawn by Frank; that the other sheets themselves were the best evidence.

On that point, said Judge Roan, he ruled that Darley could not testify unless he qualified as a handwriting expert; that the defense would have to introduce the other writings and allow those writings to speak for themselves to the jury.

On the second point, Judge Roan said, he reversed his ruling. That point was on an objection by the state that the defense should not be allowed to show the mental condition of others than Frank in the factory on Sunday morning, April 27. Judge Roan ruled with the solicitor at the morning session. This was the ruling which he reversed, giving his decision instead to the contention of the defense.

N. V. Darley, general manager at the National Pencil factory, resumed the stand at the afternoon session, the defense resuming its cross-questioning of him.

"At my request, did you look over the pecil factory during the noon hour?" began Mr. Arnold.

"Yes, sir."

DIAGRAM INACCURATE.

"I want you to state whether or not there are an yinaccuracies in this drawing. If so, tell me what they are."

Darley took Mary Phagan's parasol as a pointer and pointed to the stairway at the rear of the basement leading to the first floor, and said: "These steps are too short. The incline is seventeen feet. Apparently this isn't the correct proportion."

"What is the space between the wall of the elevator shaft and Frank's office?"

"It's five feet."

"How wide is the elevator shaft?"

"About ten feet."

"Well, isn't th espace on this diagram between the walls of the elevator shaft and Frank's office almost as wide as the elevator shaft itself?"

"Yes."

"Then the drawing is out of proportion, is it?"

"Yes."

"Anybody coming down the steps between the second and the third floor of th ebuilding has a full view of the time clock?"

"Yes, sir."

"Anybody coming down these stairs could see anybody in the metal room, couldn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever see Frank as nervous previously as on the morning of the murder?"

FRANK USUALLY NERVOUS.

"Yes, sir. One day he saw a little girl run down the street car, and he was so nervous that he couldn't work on his books.'

"Frank is of an extremely nervous temperament, isn't he?"

"Hardly a day goes by that he does not become nervous."

"Was everybody nervous around the pencil factory Sunday morning?"

"Yes."

"Were you nervous?"

"Yes. I didn't tremble though."

"Mr. Darley, I want to call your attention to another mistake in this picture. Isn't the bottom of the ladder leading from the first floor into the basement closer to the elevator than this diagram shows?"

"The distance between the bottom of the ladder and the elevator shaft is six feet."

"Doesn't it appear to be more in this drawing? Doesn't it look as if it was the same as the width of the elevator shaft?"

"Almost as far."

FRANK TRIAL CROWD SEES AUTO KNOCK DOWN YOUTH

Thronged Streets Prevented Driver Seeing Raymond Roddy—Not Seriously Hurt

Raymond Roddy, a thirteen-year-old boy who lives at 66 Williams street, was knocked down by an automobile about 9 o'clock Thursday morning near the corner of Pryor and East Hunter street, not far from the old court house where the Frank trial is taking place.

The boy was crossing Pryor street at the time, attracted by the crowd of curiosity seekers gathered around the court house. The automobile was driven by H. H. Hooten, of the Adams Grocery company, who was taking it to the shop on Mitchell street.

On account of the crowded street it is said, Hooten did not see the boy until the machine was upon him. The accident is said by spectators to have been unavoidable.

The little fellow was not unconscious, and at the Grady hospital, where he was taken, physicians said that he would probably be able to leave during the morning. No bones were borken.

Tin Can Explodes; Alarms the Police; Big Fire Put Out

An exploding tin of canned goods played the part of the Roman geese and saved the building at 23 Piedmont avenue at 3 o'clock Friday morning, according to the theory of the police.

The police on watch at headquarters heard a report like a pistol about a block away and rushed to the street. They were immediately attracted by a fire at 23 Piedmont and called the fire department. The fire was checked in time to prevent the loss being greater than $2,000.

The report that attracted them, claim the officers, was caused by a tin of canned goods exploding when it became overheated.

BLALOCK AND THOMPSON ENTER ON FEDERAL JOBS

Internal Collector and Marshal Are First Democrats in 16 Years–Make Appointments

A. O. Blalock, who recently was appointed internal revenue collector for Georgia, to succeed Henry S. Jackson, and Howard Thompson, who was appointed United States marshal for the northern district of Georgia, to succeed Walter Johnson, Friday morning took the office.

For the first time in sixteen years these offices are held by Democrats.

The first official act of Collector Blalock was the reappointment of Dr. William King, who, after service in the revenue department for twenty years or longer, was removed under the Republican administration. Dr. King is father-in-law of Henry W. Grady and of ex-Congressman W. M. Howard.

United States Marshal Thompson entered upon his duties by reappointing B. B. Landers, who has served as deputy United States marshal in the northern district of Georgia during the past twenty-four years.

Both Collector Blalock and Marshal Thompson have appointed a part of the force which will serve under them, and will complete these appointments within a few days.

Among the deputies whom Collector Blalock will appoint are Pierce Jackson, of Monticello; Roy Harrell, of Fayetteville; Miller Harrison, of Zebulon, R. O. Huie, of Atlanta; J. F. Camp, of Dalton; J. W. Martin, of Atlanta; J. A. Henderson, of Cartersville; Tobe Mote, of Sandersville.

Within a short while Marshal Thompson will announce a chief deputy marshal to succeed J. H. Rinard, who served as chief under Marshal Walter Johnson.

A. O. Blalock, the new revenue collector for Georgia, is from Fayetteville, and is one of the best known men in Georgia. For eight years he was state senator from the Twenty-sixth district, and for eight years was a member of the Georgia house of representatives. He was president pro tem last year of the senate, ann has been sepaker pro tem of the house. Among the bills which he has fathered is the constitutional amendment which provided pensions for the needy widows of Confederate veterans.

Howard Thompson, marshal for the northern district of Georgia, is from Gainesville, and is known as one of the foremost attorneys of the state. For twelve years he was solicitor general for the northeastern circuit; he has been mayor of Gainesville, in 1910 he served as a member of the state senate, and is now a trustee of the University of Georgia.

Of last year's shipments, $22,500,000 worth were in finished automobiles. Canada was the largest buyer, taking 7,200 cars, valued at $9,200,000. Look Out For Poison Ivy

Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 186 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

THUNDERSTORM CREATES HAVOC AS MERCURY DROPS

Negress Killed, Buildings Set Afire and Terminal Station Cupolas Again Damaged

July is noted as a month of thunderstorms, and although the past month had fewer than usual, Thursday, the last day of the month, furnished a heavy one that makes up for anything lost in number. Between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon lightning streaked the sky, followed by thunderbolts that shook windows.

Another cupelo of the Terminal station was shattered. Thirty or more clerks in the auditor's office just beneath were terribly frightened and Miss Carrie Colliff, a stenographer, became hysterical.

This was the second cupelo of the Terminal station to be struck by lightning, the other having been shattered several days ago. The damage to the tower is estimated at $1,000.

One remarkable feature of the storm was the rapid drop in temperature. At 3 o'clock the thermometer registered 91 degrees; five minutes later it had dropped 20 degrees, registering 71.

During the storm Florence Greenwood, an eighteen-year-old negro girl, living at 8 Moughron street, was killed by a bolt of lightning.

The girl was seated in a front room in company with her sister, Alice Greenwood and Charles Hick. When the bolt struck death followed almost instantly. Her sister's arm was horribly burned and Hicks was cut on the head by flying glass. The house caught fire, but the flames were put out before any serious damage was done.

MAY ARBITRATE DISPUTES ON SOUTHERN PACIFIC RY.

Employes Decide to Call in National Mediation Board

MUNCIE, Ind., Aug. 1.—A miraculous escape from death and injury took place early today when the tender of the New York Central Limited, No. 20, fast eastbound train, jumped the track on the middle of a 200-foot bridge five miles west of Muncie.

The train ran a third of a mile when four Pullman cars left the track. Although two steel rails were driven through the floor of one of the Pullmans, not a single passenger or trainman was injured.

POWER PLOWS IN GEORCIA

Senate Committee on Appropriations Cuts $95,000 From House Bill.

Though its action of cutting $95,000 from the general appropriations bill of the house, lowering the total amount to $5,558,000, the senate appropriations committee indicated that it would stand squarely behind the action of the same committee of the house and repeatedly any additions to the budget as originally drafted.

The committee of the upper house sliced off in all $110,000, but brought the net reduction to the amount indicated by tacking on $15,000 additional divided among the State Normal school at Athens, the State Normal and Industrial school at Milledgeville and the Georgia state sanitarium for the treatment of tuberculosis at Alto.

The appropriation for the first named institution was increased from $47,500 to $50,000; the second from $52,500 to $55,000, and for the treatment of tubercular patients the appropriation of $20,000 was augmented with an additional $5,000. The $5,000 was given the state board of health for the free distribution of vaccine.

The common school fund was reduced $50,000 and a like amount was pruned from pensions. The action in reducing the school appropriation merely places the amount at the original figure submitted in the sheet of the appropriations committee. The annual increase of $50,000 tacked on by the house had added to the budget enough to make this appropriation the same as the year before. The senate committee promptly cut it off. This again brings the common school appropriation to $2,500,000 and the pension fund from $1,070,000 to $1,020,000.

The other cut amounted to only $10,000, which amount was taken from the fund for extension work of the State Agricultural college at Athens.

There Are Twenty-Two Lawyers in the Senate

Of the different professions represented by the various members of the state senate, that of lawyer is the most popular. You can't throw a ball of paper three feet in the senate chamber without hitting an attorney. Some are "railroad lawyers," some are "damage suit" lawyers, some are "just lawyers."

Moreoverer, those who are lawyers are proud of it, and those who are not lawyers are proud that they are not. The senate orator either prefaces his speech with the statement that "I am a lawyer," or the statement, "Now, I am no lawyer."

Out of the forty-four senators, twenty-two are lawyers, seven are farmers, five are merchant-farmers, three are doctors, one is a cotton broker, one is an insurance man, two are bankers, one a court reporter, one a guano dealer, one a dentist.

Hunting Licenses to Be Ready for Distribution

State Game Warden Jesse E. Mercer announces that the new hunting licenses for the coming season will be ready within a few days. The blanks are being printed, and Mr. Mercer will be ready to give them out by next week.

The licenses this year will be printed on a different grade of paper, a heavy cloth cardboard, which should give the state nimrods much less trouble than the flimsy paper licenses formerly did.

House Committee Kills Augusta Bill for Commission Government.

Augusta's political difference received their second airing before the house committee on municipal government Thursday afternoon with the result that the bill of Messrs. Olive and Garlington, providing for commission government, was lost by the vote of 6 ot 4.. Notice immediately was given that a minority report would be filed and the fight taken to the floor of the house.

It is unusual indeed that a local bill should be the storm center of activities outside of the committee room and the outcome of the minority fight will be watched with interest throughout the state.

When the hearing was called nearly fifty Augustans for and against any change of government, were on hand. Representatives of the administration contended that the bill was for the purpose of recalling the present mayor, while the opposition declared that the incumbent was elected on the commission government platform and had afterwards repudiated his position.

The fight before the committee was a hot one with the result in doubt until it was announced after a stormy executive session.

No Further Probe Into Killing Of Augustans by Militia Likely

Contrary to expectations, there will be no further legislative inquiry into the killing of three citizens of Augusto by the militia during the street railway strike there last September. Last week the house committee on military affairs began a hearing of the Beck resolution asking for a probe of the affair. Several witnesses were examined and at adjournment it was stated that the committee again would take up the resolution subject to the call of the chairman, Representative Spence, of Mitchell.

It became known Thursday afternoon, however, that no further action would be taken by the committee during this session of the general assembly at any rate, and it is doubtful whether the proposed investigation will ever be reopened.

It is understood that the members of the committee have come, to the conclusion that no results would come from such an investigation and that it would be purely a waste of time to attempt the inquiry.

Fight for Removal of Experiment Station Goes Merrily on

With Athens and south Georgia clamoring for the experiment station and Griffin fighting to retain the institution, the proposition confronting general agricultural committee No. 1 of the house is one of the most difficult of this session of the general assembly.

A second hearing of the south Georgia proposition was given Thursday afternoon to the bill introduced by Representative Ellis, of Tift, and others. Representative Connor, of Spalding, and Senator Searcy, of Griffin, were present in the interest of their constituents and the fight was a merry one.

Action by the committee was deferred until next Tuesday, when the bill asking the removal of the station to Athens, to be made part of the State Agricultural college, comes up for consideration.

At that time all propositions will be heard, and the general clamor for possession of the farm will be settled once and for all, so far as the committee is concerned.

Congressmen Vexed By Transfer System On Washington Lines

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Representative Buchanan, of Illinois, set himself today to outline some legislation that will solve the Washington street car transfer question. At the same time a conductor on a Pennsylvania avenue line was receiving congratulations of his fellow-workers that he still was alive, for yesterday he attempted to prevent Representative Buchanan from boarding a car because the congressman's transfer showed some discrepancies. Mr. Buchanan, a former iron worker and a physical giant, was said by witnesses to have been on the point of walking over or through the blockading conductor when cool-headed friends appeared.

Members of the present house have figured during the present summer in a number of clashes over the transfer question. Representative Sisson, of Mississippi, only recently engaged in a heated argument with a conductor. Traffic was tied up for some time. A woman passenger, evidently anxious to get home to dinner, was said to have paid surreptitiously the legislator's fare, thus allowing the car to proceed.

Mr. Sisson, it was reported today, stood ready to join with Mr. Buchanan in the framing of some law to govern the issue of the transfer slips.

COMMERCIAL CONGRESS TO INVITE MR. WILSON

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 1.—A delegation, headed by Governor O'Neal, has been selected to invite President Wilson to attend the sessions of the Southern Commercial congress here.

You Folks Who Want Your Town to Grow--

DISEASE and poverty are twin-brothers to insanitary living-conditions.

Sickness cripples the working and earning capacity. Then follows poverty and distress. This means trouble for everybody.

Is your town clean and healthy? Is it disease-proof so far as correct sanitation can make it so?

Is the water-supply free from contamination?

Remember that a breeding-place of disease may be a scourge to your town. And remember, too, that such a scourge may take toll of your own home.

Our specialty is SANITARY ENGINEERING.

We have cleaned up and straightened out more than 300 towns. We have shown them beyond the shadow of a doubt that improvements are the best investment they ever made.

We want to improve your town and we can show you that it will pay you well from every point of view.

A town that is insanitary, unsightly, inconvenient and unattractive will never draw new population to itself.

More than that: it won't hold its present population. The young fellows growing up, the enlightened men and women are not going to stay where the conditions are bad and out-of-date.

Does your town want to grow? If it does and if YOU are concerned to have it grow the right way, write to us. We will give you all the information you want.

We plan, construct, finance and operate sanitary systems, water and power plants, paving and all municipal improvements. We can show you a big and successful record of our achievements.

ATLANTA TEACHER LOSES NEW $26,000 HOME BY FIRE

Prof. J. H. Smith, of Boys' High School, Had Just Furnished Residence

The many friends in Atlanta of Prof. J. H. Smith of the Boys' High school, will regret to learn that his new residence in Marietta, just completed at a cost of $26,000, was on Thursday totally destroyed by fire. The insurance was $22,500. Prof. Smith had just furnished his house.

The house represents a long and careful process of construction. It was situated on the site of the old Georgia Military academy, on College Hill, on one of the best building sites in Marietta.

The fire started in the basement under the kitchen and spread rapidly. The home was higher than the waterworks standpipe and so far back from the street that assistance from the fire department was made difficult.

BILL TO PROTECT DESERTED WIVES

It Is Proposed to Repay Them for Husband's Chaingang Labor

A bill providing for deserted wives and children to be paid for the chain gang labor of the deserting husbands, in the event they are sentenced to chain gangs, has been prepared at the instance of Probation Officer Coogler, of the Atlanta police department, and the Atlanta Associated Charities, and an effort will be made to have the same made a law at the present session of the general assembly.

Under the present laws of Georgia there is no provision for the expenditure of money to bring deserting husbands back into the state when they leave, and when they are occasionally brought back their wives are disposed not to prosecute them, knowing no support will come from husbands in the chain gang.

A number of states have passed laws similar to the one now proposed to the Georgia legislature, and probation officers and social workers are agreed on the need for such legislation in this state.

DALTON SLAYERS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCES BY FITE

Hatfield Granted Clemency Because of Circumstantial Evidence—Others Released

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 1.—Dan Hatfield and Clem Poole were this morning sentenced to the penitentiary for life, the former being convicted of the murder of Will Parrish, and the latter of the murder of Policeman Cook.

Judge Fite exercised his right to sentence Hatfield to life imprisonment, as the man was convicted on purely circumstantial evidence, instead of passing the death sentence as was expected from the jury's verdict of guilty without recommendation. John and Tom Nicodemus, jointly indicted with Hatfield, were released on their own recognizance, as there was not sufficient evidence to show the existence of any conspiracy to kill Parrish.

GRIZZLY BEAR AND TWO CUBS GIVEN ATLANTA BY UNCLE SAM

Thanks to Dan Carey's Persistence, They're on Their Way From Yellowstone Park, and Will Be Installed in Grant Park Zoo

A really wild and wooly grizzly bear and two cubs, fresh from the west, and still indignant from having been trapped, are due to reach Atlanta some time next week. They are for the Grant park zoo, having been secured from the United States government by Dan Carey, general manager of parks, after two and a half years of persistent correspondence.

After a series of letters, some of which were rather humorous, the general manager received a telegram Friday morning from Yellowstone Park announcing that the bears are on their way.

The mother was trapped at Canyon, thirty-one miles out from Yellowstone Park, about ten days ago, and after some maneuvering, the two babies were captured also. Their combined weight is 1,400 pounds, which indicates that Atlanta is to have a sizable grizzly indeed.

When General Manager Carey decided he wanted the bears he went after them with a light heart and an assured manner. He wrote to the government, stating his wishes and sat back to await the arrival of the bears. After some time he received a letter saying, "No bears available, write later." At intervals he sent persistent queries and finally secured official permission to get the bears from Yellowstone Park. He thought his troubles were over, and wired Lieutenant L. M. Brett, superintendent of Yellowstone Park, to send the bears along.

"The bears are already hibernating for the winter, and we can't get them," wrote the lieutenant in reply.

Disconsolate, but not discouraged, Mr. Carey made a notation on his calendar for March. When March came he wrote the superintendent, "I suppose those bears are coming out of winter quarters now as the spring has set in, and would be glad to get one."

The reply was that the thermometer out there was 13 degrees below zero and that about five or six inches of snow covered everything—not a very inviting prospect for the bears. At intervals of every two weeks or thereabouts Mr. Carey sent in a reminder to Yellowstone, and as a result of his persistence, the superintendent, either in fulfillment of his promise or in desperation, finally got the mother bear and cubs.

They're on their way.

N. Y. TAXICAB ORDINANCE STOPPED BY INJUNCTIONS

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—An avalanche of injunctions served on the police today virtually prevented enforcement of the new taxicab ordinance which went into effect at midnight. The ordinance reduced fares about one-tthird and abolished the private stands operated by the larger hotels and restaurants. The injunctions were obtained by the hotel and restaurant keepers, who hold that they are unable to give their guests proper cab service unless they furnish private stands for the taxicab companies.

Won't Reset Elms

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The historic old elm trees in the White House grounds which were blown over in Wednesday's storm will not be reset. Instead, younger trees will be planted. This was decided today after a careful inspection by F. F. Gellen, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, and nurserymen. It was found the fallen trees were too old for replanting.

Every little country has a revolution all its own.

Many a toboggan comes between the first of August and the last league game.

Summer engagements are short because the young man's two weeks' advance salary doesn't last long.

Carrying Education to the People.

There could be no surer evidence of the substantial and far-reaching service of the Georgia College of Agriculture than the large attendance at the farmers' Institutes which the College is conducting throughout the State. Up to the present time more than thirty-six thousand farmers have been present at these lectures and demonstrations, about twice the number recorded during the same period last year. The audiences have ranged in size from a hundred and fifty to two thousand people, according to the population of the district. At Talbotton, twelve hundred were present and at Duluth, in an entirely different part of the State, the same number.

The State College of Agriculture is thus reaching the people. It is not merely an institution; it is a vital, constructive force. It is stimulating and training not only the hundreds of young men enrolled in its immediate student body but also the thousands of mature farmers who are at work in the fields. Not only does it offer the opportunities of education but it also carries those opportunities directly to the rank and file.

This is true service, the sort of service that produces results for the individual and the commonwealth as a whole. Surely, an institution that reaches thirty-six thousand men within a few summer weeks, helping them to solve their problems, encouraging them in scientific and progressive methods, organizing them in a great movement that will bless the State with more varied and abundant harvests—surely, such an institution merits the public's heartiest approval and the Legislature's generous support.

Uncle Sam is proving himself to be a cheerful lender.

Of course Castro couldn't resist such a general epidemic of revolution.

It doesn't do to say nice things about the weather and then have it misbehave.

Of course, there isn't any sense in getting mad when the home team loses, but who cares anything about sense at such a time?

A Discredited Ambassador.

Ambassador Wilson's reception at the White House has been well described as "faultlessly courteous but finally unsympathetic." The Boston Transcript observes in this connection: "The President is determined that his ambassador of the same name shall not have an opportunity to pose as a martyr before the country. The ambassador is to be given a few days in which to recover from the severe nervous strain his duties have entailed, and then his resignation will be accepted."

The sooner he is retired the better; for, his conduct from first to last has been more like that of a personal agent of the usurping Huerta than of a diplomat representing the policies and the interests of the United States. Ambassador Wilson has gone contrary to the counsels of the Taft administration, under which he was appointed, and even more so to those of the present administration under which he has been suffered, through pressure of circumstance, to tarry at the Mexican post. Whether it be true, as some reports would seem to indicate, that he had foreknowledge of the foul conspiracy against President Madero, it is clear that he has done his utmost to enlist the moral and political support of the United States in behalf of those responsible for Madero's murder. He has been a partisan of the Huerta regime, insisting that our Government extend its official recognition to ... cause that is smeared with treason and barbarity.

Such a man does not represent the principles of our Government nor the sentiment of our people. His rash interviews since reaching this country have brought upon him the condemnation even of those who were disposed to sympathize with his recommendations. He is glaringly unfit to hold the Mexican ambassadorship. The President does well to let him go, for, with such an ambassador out of the way, the United States can deal more easily and effectively with the Mexican problem.

Uncle Sam could also lend a little to the public summer vacation fund.

There seems to be nothing left to Huerta now but to assassinate himself.

Lightning made an exception in Atlanta's case and hit twice in the same place.

That baseball college out in California ought to have no trouble finding experts as professors.

If a man worries about his debts it's a sign that he is honest; the dishonest man lets the other fellow worry.

The One Way Out.

There is but one path of escape from the fiscal perplexities in which Georgia is now involved, and that is a thoroughgoing measure of tax reform. The State stands impoverished amid affluence. Naturally one of the richest commonwealths in all the Union, it is unable to pay its school teachers, unable to maintain its public institutions as they should be, unable to carry out scores of fertile enterprises that are clamoring for performance, unable to meet the simplest needs or to discharge the plainest duties to its citizens.

The cause and the cure for these ills are equally apparent. Our beggarly revenues are due beyond question to an outworn, slipshod system of taxation. The business of a great State cannot be conducted after the fashion of a blind mendicant who holds out his hat for alms. It is only by equalizing taxes among individuals and among counties that the State can ever hope to deal justly with itself and with its people.

To see that this is done is the Legislature's supremely important task. In fairness to all counties and all citizens, it cannot adjourn without passing some adequate measure of tax equalization; and no such measure will be adequate that fails to provide for State as well as county supervision of tax returns. It is to be hoped that the House will reconsider the course it has thus far pursued in this important issue. There are few honest differences of opinion that cannot be reconciled, if those who differ come together in frank and patriotic counsel, remembering that when public interests and a State's good name are in the balance, there is no time for prejudice or hair-splitting. The Journal would not attempt or presume to dictate the action of any member of the General Assembly but, believing as we do that the great majority if not every man of them wishes to serve the State's best and widest interests, we urge them to agree speedily upon some plan of tax equalization that will be genuine and effective.

The need of such action is rendered especially imperative by the fact that the House appropriations already agreed upon exceed the anticipated revenue by some three hundred thousand dollars. Unless this large discrepancy between income and appropriations is somehow to be evened up, it must be evened down, that is to say the appropriations must be cut. And who will say where the reduction shall begin?

Shall we cut the already meager salaries of the school teachers?

Shall we shear the State's institutions of the bare necessities of existence?

Shall we block the progress of agricultural education and those helpful agencies which make for the development of our farms and the prosperity and independence of the farmer?

Shall we deny our children their right to efficient schools and the rank and file of the people their right to efficient, progressive government simply through a failure to enact a practical measure of tax equalization that will put the needed funds in the treasury?

Surely, no member of the Legislature is ready to assume such responsibility! Surely, none of them is ready to go home and tell his people that vital interests which lie close to their business and their hearts have been sacrificed to an antiquated tax system! And yet to this must we come, unless some means of bringing revenues up to appropriations is provided. The Senate should not concur in the appropriations bill as it now stands unless it is accompanied by another bill that will assure an income sufficient to meet the required expenditures; and there is every indication that, otherwise, the Senate will not concur.

This is the problem now before the House—and before all Georgia. Shall it be solved in a spirit of broad, practical statesmanship or left to grow more and more hopelessly entangled? Its only solution, we believe, lies in an agreement among the members of the House on an adequate plan of tax equalization. To the perfection and adoption of such a plan, every member of the Legislature should give earnest and unselfish effort.

All the world looks down on a man who is in a hole.

If you would hit the target of success you must aim before you shoot.

Before burning your bridges behind you be sure they are fully insured.

As mirthful a bit of reading as one could find in a summer's day is reproduced elsewhere on this page from the Albany Herald under its own caption, "A Pitiful Exhibition."

This case which the Herald so well describes might impress pathologists as a rare instance of the fossilizing effect of unrestrained spleen and prejudice; but it will doubtless strike the average reader simply as one of those Falstaffian blunders which furnish "argument for a week, laughter for a month and a good jest forever."

Some folk are so sand-blind with prejudice that they couldn't tell a hawk from a handsaw, if both were labeled "Bryan."

THE KEOKUK DAM

III.—THE POWER PLANT.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The dam at Keokuk furnishes more power than may be found at any other water power plant in the world, and this is transformed into electric power in quite the most wonderful of power houses. Built out in the river, close to and parallel with the Iowa shore, the power house is a part of the one gigantic concrete monolith that forms the whole project, and of itself is 1,718 feet long, 132 feet wide and 77 feet high.

In this giant house are to be installed thirty of the largest turbine water wheels in existence, fifteen of them being already at work. And here, at these wheels, centers the interest in the whole mammoth project. The generators revolve above the turbines, being fixed to the same shaft. The turbine and the generator together weigh more than 550,000 pounds, and this enormous weight of metal revolves at about the speed of sixty revolutions a minute. The bottom of the turbine wheel is a disk with a plane surface six feet in diameter. It rests on another disk of the same diameter, which is fixed in the bottom of the pit, and the whole weight of more than half a million pounds revolves on this plane bearing. If it were not for perennially effective lubrication this installation would not last ten seconds, for the friction would destroy both plates.

Oil is forced in between these two disks under such pressure that a film of oil always keeps the two faces separated, and as a matter of fact the whole 550,000 pounds of the revolving part rests on the oil. But suppose something should happen to the oil pumping machinery? Should this oil film fail away, then the upper part would drop down on a set of roller bearings continually immersed in oil, which are set in the surface of the lower plate. Thus the engineers believe they have made ample precaution against injury to the plant by the failure of lubrication, since either method would be sufficient, and it is highly improbable that both would fail at the same time.

The turbines themselves, considered apart from the generators to which they are attached, are the largest wheels ever made. They had to be cast at some foundry in the central plain of the continent, as the railroads could not carry them over the mountains. They were cast at Akron, Ohio, and as it was the railroads were severely tested in transporting them to Keokuk. Water tanks and coal chutes between Lake Erie and the Mississippi had to be moved, the car carrying the wheel (only one was shipped at a time) had to be routed over many different railroads in order to make the journey without crossing any but the new style of concrete bridges that have no upper works across the tracks, and executive officers of the railroads had to ride with the wheel so as to give the necessary orders for moving a freight house, or some other obstruction, along the route when occasion demanded. Each turbine was a casting of iron weighing over seventy-three tons, being sixteen and a half feet in diameter and eleven and a quarter feet high.

In the power house each wheel is set in a concrete chamber of its own, a chamber built in scroll fashion with four openings, each of different size, presented to the up-stream sweep of the water, the partitions between these openings being of odd and curious shapes. They are so designed that the water coming through these openings will be swept by the curved surfaces of the inner part of the scroll chamber so that the water will attack every inch of the circumference of the water wheel with exactly the same fore. Then the water is taken off through a drain at the bottom of the chamber so that its action power when leaving is almost as great as its power when rushing in against the wheel. In this manner the engineers have contrived to obtain for practical use a greater proportion of the energy of the water than ever before has been done.

The actual exertion of power on the buckets on the wheel is regulated by a system of guide vanes which surround the wheel and which are so regulated that when wide open they will expose the wheel to the full power of the Mississippi and when closed cut off all its power. These vanes are regulated by a sensitive governor, an automatic device so ingenious that when a street car stops to take on a passenger in the city of St. Louis, nearly 150 miles away, and, therefore, a little less than a second is required for a fraction of a minute, those vanes will close just sufficiently to cut down the power that much, opening again as the faraway street car again makes demand for power.

The shaft on which the turbines revolve is more than two feet in diameter and to the upper part is attached a huge wheel, which is the revolving frame of the electric generation. This wheel, over twenty-five feet in diameter, having fixed to its rims coils of wound wire of miles and miles in length. This revolving field turns within the armature which is a huge rim fixed to the floor of the power chamber above, the turbine pits. The entire generator in its case is thirty-one feet in diameter, twelve feet high in the center and over seven feet high at the rim. When the plant is complete there will be thirty of these giant cheese boxes on the floor of the greatest of all power plants.

Students of physics know that the revolving field becomes a mammoth magnet by means of an exciting current and as its coils with their lines of force are cut by the coils in the armature, electricity is generated and may be carried away on wires. The electricity leaves the generator at 11,000 volts, but in a transformer a short distance away it is "stepped up" to 110,000 volts before it goes out on the transmission wires. When it reaches St. Louis or any other city where the power is to be used it is "stepped down" again to 11,000 volts. Those who are not students of physics will have to take this on faith, just as they do all the other mysteries of the electric current.

The city of St. Louis, 144 miles away, receives its power from Keokuk over a transmission line built with the most elaborate precautions against accident or interruption of current. The cables are made of nineteen strands of wire, much stronger than ever before used for this purpose. They are designed to resist a pull of 14,000 pounds, giving a wide margin of safety as compared with the load of 7,000 pounds that would be exerted were the cables encased in half an inch of ice, the temperature at zero and the wind blowing sixty miles an hour.

These cables are carried on steel towers, eath one of which, on the straight sections of the line, measures seventy-nine feet in height and twenty feet square at the base, the corners of this square each carrying one leg of the steel tower bolted to an independent reinforced concrete foundation weighing two tons, and extending six feet into the ground.

Electrical and hydraulic engineers all over the world have watched with intense interest the successful installation of this greatest of all power plants, and they have willingly crowned Hugh L. Cooper, the chief engineer and creative genius of the enterprise, with the laurel of unstinted praise.

To have harnessed the Father of Waters is itself an undertaking of which any man might be proud, but to have done so in such manner that the highest known records of efficiency were excelled is something that will stand long in the hero stories of an engineering age.

Now that it has been established, beyond a peradventure of a doubt, that there was no catastrophe in Lima, Peru, as first reported, we may cease to stay awake worrying about the town.

The Conning Tower

BY FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

For complete characterization we like this, from a letter written in 1896 to Daniel Gregory Mason by William Vaughan Moody: "Another Girl . . . a Californian, dating mentally from the age of Rousseau and Chateaubriand, with geysers and bursts of romanticism, not to say sentimentality; dating spiritually from the Age of Gold, or some remoter purity, some Promethean dawn, some first-foam-birth in hyperborean seas. She likes Gibson's drawings, adores 'Munsey's', and sings 'Don't Be Cross, Dear,' with awful unction."

Also, for pure charm and frank companionability, we beg to recommend a reading of the Moody letters. They are in the August "Atlantic." Moody was as fine a poet as we know of, and these letters show that he was considerable man, too. So many letters of litterateurs appear to be conscious, as though the writer had a fear or a hope that some day his most trivial communication might be published. That is the impression we cannot efface whenever we read Stevenson's letters; but there is none of that in the Moody collection.

Then Will Beebe and I did play against E. Henderson and R. THE MUSICAL CITY

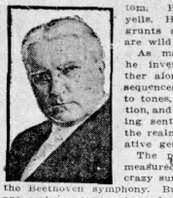
BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

That our civilization is yet but half baked is proved by its noise, by the unlikeness of its sounds.

It is characteristic of the savage that he loves crude sounds. He beats the tom-tom. His war songs are harsh yells. His talk is composed of grunts and clicks. His sons are wild and formless croonings.



As man advances in culture he invents melodies; still farther along he makes harmonies, sequences, applying mathematics to tones, their relation and duration, and bring the art of expressing sentiment in sound up into the realm of intelligence and creative genius.

The progress of the race is measured by the span from the crazy sun dance of the savage to the Beethoven symphony. But we have not yet felt any serious pressure toward making street sounds musical. Iron-clad trucks still rattle over cobblestones with din and thunder. Street cars roar, screech and clang. Subway trains suggest nothing but the orchestras of hell, and elevated trains the cacophonies of angry harpies. Icemen, peddlers, newsboys, barkers and old clothes men call their wares in tones as rough as piercing as possible.

Vocal advertisements seem to aim to attract attention, even as billboards, electric signs and street car advertisements, by the impact of their impudence and their annoying quality upon the spirits of the passers-by.

When we shall have learned that the concord of pleasing sounds is a necessary food to human beings, and that to reduce the friction of daily life to music would add to the joy of existence, we shall order things differently.

First, we shall eliminate all clash of metal upon metal. Any sort of racket will be regarded as a punishable offense against the public peace.

The streets will be paved with noiseless asphalt. Horses will be banished from cities, or become scarce as oxen.

Auto motors will be used exclusively for transportation of both men and goods. Each motor will be equipped with a silencer.

Some genius will invent a device to render mute the trains that run on steel tracks. Probably the only reason this has not already been invented is that nobody cares. We are half barbarous, and love noise.

The necessary sounds of warning in the streets will be made musical. Would not people learn to jump aside at the melodious blast of a bugle as well as by the horrible hoot of a hooting horn or the irritating jangle of an alarm bell?

And why should not an automobile play a Wagner motif upon a sweet-sounding instrument?

Then newsboys might learn a picturesque Times motif, or Tribune, or News, or Globe motif.

The peddlers might be compelled to sing their wares in tuneful lay.

Fire engines might have a brass band phonographic attachment that would peal forth stirring martial music as they sweep through the streets.

Then the whole city, with its intense vitality, would be as a great orchestra and chorus, lifting human souls to beauty and courage, sending forth all day melodies and harmonious paens, instead of the howls and crashes of a witches' Sabbath.

Ugly city sounds come from three sources—the imperfection of roads and vehicles, warning by discord, and advertising by startling and offensive noises. The city of the future will add to human happiness by changing all these to beauty and music.

"A Pitiful Exhibition."

(Albany Herald.)

Who can say that Wilson and Clark and Underwood; Houston, Burleson, McAdoo and McReynolds; Justice White and Lamar, Senators Bacon, Smith, Bryan, Williams and Simmons, and scores of others are not worthy of the best traditions of the old south?—The High School Quarterly (Athens, Ga.)

In what way is Mr. Bryan "worthy of the best traditions of the old south," or even of the rather uncertain traditions of the new? He was born in Illinois and resided there until he reached the age of twenty-seven, then removed to Lincoln, Neb., which has been his home ever since. Moreover, he has never shown anything like marked friendship for the south or the southern people and occasionally in former years even exhibited some measure of hostility, as when he refused to vote for Crisp, of Georgia, for speaker of the house on the ground that he was an ex-Confederate soldier.

This must be an error that through some oversight escaped correction at the hands of the editor.—Macon Telegraph.

There's a savory morsel for you! It could have appeared on just one editorial page in Georgia. Had we been blindfolded and backed into Egyptian darkness, we could have given it proper credit without a moment's hesitation.

The Macon Telegraph has made itself the laughing stock of the state by just such puerile sallies as the above. The Macon paper's stubborn refusal to see any possibility of good in the Wilson administration in general, and its daily barking at the heels of William J. Bryan in particular, have led it into a chronic case of the "sillies" of which the Bingville Bugle would be ashamed, and for which there seems to be no cure.

There is not a high school boy in Georgia who could by any possibility fail to understand that the Bryan to whom reference is made in the quoted extract from the Athens High School Quarterly is Senato. Nathan P. Bryan, of Florida. The writer in the Athens publication mentions, first, the president, the speaker of the house and the majority leader. Then he groups he names four members of the cabinet. Then he mentions the Louisianian and the Georgian who are members of the supreme court of the United States. He next names five senate leaders—Bacon and Smith, of Georgia; "Bryan," of Florida; Clark, Williams, of Mississippi, and Simmons of North Carolina. These, mind you, are all southern men. Had the writer of the paragraph intended to include Secretary of State Bryan in his list, he would have placed him among the cabinet officers, and not in the list of senators. As it was, he placed the Florida senator, whose name happens to be Bryan, where it belonged.

But the Telegraph, blinded by prejudice so narrow that it both fails and refuses to see, is oblivious of all else save that the hated name of Bryan appeared in the High School Quarterly's list of southerners "worthy of the best traditions of the old south." Wave a red flag at a bull, and he inquires not whether the rag be silk or calico. Its color alone interests him. The Telegraph, likewise, when the name of Bryan is mentioned in its hearing, or printed where its editor can read, pauses not to inquire or to reason. It immediately opens its ever handy bottle of venom, and proceeds to smear it thickly on its editorial page.

It beats a comedy reel at the movies, and yet, it's pitiful to behold.

SENATE PROVIDES FOR FOURTH FULTON JUDGE

Measure Waits Governor's Signature—Would Quarantine Boll Weevil Cotton

The senate passed two important measures Friday. One was the bill giving the Atlanta circuit a fourth superior court judge, which had previously been passed by the house and now needs only the governor's signature, and the other was a bill quarantining cotton shipped from boll weevil sections.

The bill allowing another superior court judge was introduced in the house by Representatives Smith, Blackburn and Cochran. At present the Atlanta circuit has only three superior court judges, Judge Bloan, of the Stone Mountain circuit, as an extra judge, taking care of criminal business.

The measure was passed by a vote of 26 to 4, Senators Tarver, Cliff, Pope and Parrish voting against it.

The quarantine measure was introduced by Senator Ford. It would provide for a rigid quarantine against cotton shipped into the state from sections infested with the boll weevil.

The senate committee on penitentiaries will leave during the afternoon for Milledgeville, where it will go to inspect the state prison farm.

JUDGE BROYLES LEAVES FOR VACATION MONDAY

Golf Far From the Railroad Will Keep Him Busy for Month

Every summer the judge goes to Highlands, N. C., for his vacation. Long tramps over the mountains and plenty of golf keeps him occupied and happy.

Highlands is 18 miles from the railroad and it is up hill going, so the judge takes a hack over, but coming back he does a "Weston" and enjoys the stroll greatly. Incidently Recorder Broyles finds the exercise fine for walking down the mountain. He believes he can beat his old mark and will try coming back.

His wife and daughter, Miss Harriett Broyles are in Highlands now and will spend most of the summer there.

During Recorder Broyles' vacation, Clerk of the Court W. H. Hunton, will serve as recorder and the court bailiff, D. A. Arthur, will take the clerk's place.

Mayor Woodward Declines to Act As City Recorder

Despite Mayor Woodward's pronounced views on police court matters he declined Friday to act as recorder. Judge Broyles is hving a vacation from the troubles and tribulations of police court, and Judge "Pro Tem" Preston, decided that he would invite the mayor to hold court Monday.

So he went to city hall, called on the mayor and gave him a special invitation to preside on the bench.

The mayor, however, most positively declined, saying he never had held court, and never would; that it wasn't the mayor's business. So Judge Preston will have to dispense justice himself.

Appropriations in Georgia

"By their fruits, you shall know them."
---Matt. 7-20

"Now we pray to God---
"Not that we may appear approved,

"But that you may do that which is honorable,

"Though we be as reprobate."
---2nd. Cor. 13;7.

Not attacks.

Facts.

Some appropriations in Georgia:

$10,000.00 agriculture.

$10,000.00 carrying out pure food and drug act.

$ 5,000.00 for cattle tick eradication and protection of live stock.

$15,000.00 to developing live stock and exterminating the cattle tick.

$ 6,000.00 to manufacture and distribute hog cholera serum.

$20,000.00 horticulture and entomology.

Nothing for wayward and delinquent girls—for their protection, development and culture—

Later, if—

Maybe, next year—

God pity them!

THEY CANNOT WAIT.

These are girls—not hogs, nor cows, nor fields which may be replaced.

Once lost, these—?

And crime claws—

Hell reaches out for them, even while you talk.

Seventy-five girls—

Only those under sixteen known to us—others—scores are in the state, sinking because there is no place.

Care for prisoners is required by the laws of Georgia and of God, as well as appropriations for sick cattle and hogs. And if the State's wards—we will not call them prisoners—be as they are, these girls, what will you do with them?

In the chaingang?

With the hardened prisoners of the prison farm?

You could not put them in your reformatory for boys.

WHAT OF THESE GIRLS?

The Prison Commission says:

"No place for them in Georgia."

Agriculture.

Pure food.

Tickless cattle.

Choleraless hogs.

These are much to be desired; they should be cultivated and sought.

But you know these girls. You would take care of them. They are more valuable than our cows and hogs.

Georgia's shame! Other states take care of girls. Why not Georgia?

Of the JONES-MILLS BILL providing a reformatory for girls, CHAIRMAN WHEATLEY said:

"It was referred to a sub-committee to plan for the creation of a home and to make such changes in the measure for an appropriation that could be granted."

Cutting $45,000 from the $75,000 appropriation asked, the sub-committee reported back the Bill carrying an appropriation of $30,000, for action by the whole committee.

The Penitentiary Committee had previously recommended the Bill without a dissenting vote. All recognize the need.

And if money can be obtained for the cultivation of hogs, cattle and fields, surely it can be found for this—the saving of girls.

NOT AN ATTACK.

A fact:

We believe that the Committee on Appropriations will find a way.

While taking care of beasts and spraying bugs, you will not neglect and destroy our girls.

You can protect both.

You will.

BULLISH BUREAU REPORT CAUSED RISE IN COTTON

Maret in New York Closed 8 to 14 Pts. Higher Than the Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, August 1.—This morning's weather advices were considered more favorable in the cotton market. Showers were shown in north Texas, while local forecasts thought might work down into the drouthy section. The market opened steady at an advance of 2 to 5 points on high cables, but there was considerable demand, few traders being disposed to sell for short account on the eve of an important government report.

The government report, making the condition of the crop 70.6 per cent, against 81.8 last last month and 76.5 last year, proved rather more bullish than expected and the early following was a quick advance of about 15 points in prices. Estimated receipts at all ports today total 1,000, against 8,231 last week, and 1,061 last year.

Trading became more active in the afternoon and the circulation of the government figures seemed to bring in fresh buying. Prices worked about 16 to 18 points above yesterday's closing.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 1.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 6 points down compared with the close of yesterday. Cables were not up to expectations but selling was checked by the continued dry weather in the western cotton belt, and the prediction of local rain in north west Texas and Oklahoma in the forecast. The market moved over a range of only 2 to 3 points in the early trading and at the end of the first half hour of business stood 1 to 6 points under the final figures of yesterday.

The condition report of 79.6 per cent of the normal on July 25, was a little more bullish and more so than the bulls themselves dared hope for, but as a market influence it fell flat, there being almost an entire lack of speculative trading owing to threatened anti-future legislation. Much comment was made after the report on the fact that proposed anti-future measures before congress were costing more of new crop cotton much money by restricting buying of contracts. A matter of no less interest in the report the market was extremely dull. For a few minutes after the report was issued prices were advanced 6 to 10 points, the most active months going to a level 7 points over yesterday's close. At noon the market was dull but steady at a net rise of 5 to 6 points.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times Democrat says:

Professional belief that today's bureau will show a crop condition deterioration of about one full point under last month's figure held the general sentiment in check. The unsettled weather map readings, indicating near future rains over the dry area in the west, impelled some desire to sell fall deliveries. However, an official forecast of fair weather in Texas checked bearish impulses. The July option passed into history at New York, New Orleans and Liverpool with liquidated long before the end. Two or three trailers remained in at New York and the early fluctuations at that station there were rather exciting, the price ranging as low as 11.70 and as high as 11.85, with swings of about 25 points between fluctuations.

Map shows generally cloudy belt: some rain in northwest Texas and in Houston section; very little rain in other central states; not quite as warm in north portion Saturday.

Mississippi, Alabama, showers tonight or Saturday.

Rain during very light no feature, rains reported in some sections western belt and local excessive precipitation some rains within next forty-eight hours. Market awaits very steady at close government report at noon.

Local showers in state of Taylor, central Texas, showing rainy conditions.

New York Journal of Commerce: Weather corrected by addition of 11,870 bales.

Up to bids in New York were as follows: August 11.78; October 11.31; December 11.29; January 11.20; March 11.29.

Sales in New Orleans were: August 11.60; October 11.26; December 11.33; January 11.33; March 11.42.

Official records show a temperature average of 84 degrees for the week, 100 degrees, 70 degrees, and one at 106.

Rain is the principal anticipation of rains in Texas and delay to movement.

Stimulated demand and was received with skepticism there is rain promised over much of Texas. The market is quite lifeless and drastic seems there will be a change in speculative views for something to turn up. Rains in Texas during next twenty-four hours would probably cause decline while continued dry weather will operate to sustain values.—Miller & Cotter.

STOCK GOSSIP

New Jersey summary: Secretary McAdoo announces $50,000,000 government bonds will be called in to be used in the purchase of south and west to facilitate crop movement. With acute commercial paper and government 2s at par as collateral, banks can realize quick profits. Mansion choice for mayor of New York. U. S. Steel unfilled orders show increase of 1,000,000 tons. Decrease of about 400,000 tons. Montreal dispatches say Canadian Pacific directors have practically decided on 12 per cent additional dividend for common stock in August. Pennsylvania earnings for July show gain of $1,252,000 less than June, 1912. Six months net $4,-676,000 decrease year, second half. Twenty active rails declined 29; 12 industrials declined 11.

Think we will have a good trading market for the next week, with an upward tendency in prices. Short interest is large for this season, preferring active issues like Union Pacific, Copper, Steels, Reading, and that there may be a decision handed down against Harriman within the next few days, but would buy this issue on any break or declaration against the company would mean segregation and ultimately higher prices.—Potter.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter Ocean says:

Opinion prevailed wheat traders last night were not so unanimously bearish. A few of the big operators seemed to believed all bearish conditions have been discounted for the present. At the same time, they are not looking for much of an upturn, but expect that fluctuations will be coarse grains should have a creating effect on wheat values. There was noticeable a number of local bulls took profits on corn on reaction and that these transactions after bulges higher prices. Bulls are talking much about

Barlett, Frazier & Co. say: Wheat—We should have a higher market today and we believe that there is beginning a good scare. Corn—Map of the corn belt except at one or two points in Ohio valley. Cash for continued growth in the market.

Oats—New buying of a limited character and local sentiment is rather inclined to be bearish on continued heavy stocks.

Provisions—Market still shows signs of scattered, foolish, bearish sentiment. New crop lards. Excepting the January deliveries.

Omaha Bee says: Wheat and corn bulletin shows no rain in Nebraska. Entire state clear, except part of northeast portion.

Kansas City—Corn and wheat region bulletin shows no rain; maximum Kansas temperatures 87 to 98.

St. Louis—Hot, heavy shower last night, but did not extend three miles east.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 1.—Weather map shows the precipitation yesterday overnight, closely nearly the entire belt with some rain in north west Texas, the Houston district, and a sprinkle at Taylor. The forecast is fair in the central states, but general precipitation over the Atlantic coast. Temperatures are for cool wave to come on the western and central states with consequently fair weather and no rain in the near future in the dry section of Texas, and showers and weather is also indicated for the rest of the belt.

Liverpool advanced spots 4 points; sales 7,000. Futures open 2 points better than due, no change attributed the recovery to the anticipation of a bullish bureau condition. Our market was opened with October around 1.30, up to the time of the bureau publication at 11 o'clock. Good premiums for more rain in Texas acted as a check on the fear of a bureau report.

There was a rumor of labor troubles having set in Lancashire and mills about to close in the Oldham district.

The government gave 79.6 as the condition to July 25. The market advanced to 11.38 for October soon after its release.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BED TIME

By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Love is a beautiful, wonderful thing.
There's nothing quite like it on all the great earth.
'Tis love in the heart teaches birdies to sing,
And gives the wide world all its joy and its mirth.

Peter Rabbit was finding this out. Always he had been happy, for happiness had been born in him. But the happiness he had known before was nothing to the happiness that was his when he found that he loved little Miss Fuzzytail and that little Miss Fuzzytail loved him. Peter was sure that she did love him, although she wouldn't say so. But love doesn't need words to make itself felt, and Peter had seen it shining in the two soft, gentle eyes of little Miss Fuzzytail. So Peter was happy in spite of the trouble that old Jed Thumper, the big, gray rabbit who was the father of little Miss Fuzzytail, had made for him in the Old Pasture.

He had tried very hard, very hard indeed, to get little Miss Fuzzytail to go back with him to the dear old briar patch in the Green Meadows. But in spite of all he could say she couldn't make up her mind to leave the Old Pasture, which, you know, had been her home ever since she was born. And Peter couldn't make up his mind to go back there and leave her because—why, because he loved her so much that he felt that he could never, never be happy without her. Then, when old Jed Thumper was hunting Peter so hard that he hardly had a chance to eat or sleep, had come Old Man Coyote the Wolf and given old Jed Thumper such a fright that for a week he didn't poke so much as his nose out of his hillbrier castle.

Now, although Old Man Coyote didn't know it, his terrible voice had frightened little Miss Fuzzytail almost as much as it had old Jed Thumper. You see she never had heard it before. She didn't even know what it was, and all that night she had crouched in her most secret hiding place shivering and shaking with fright. The next morning Peter had found her there. She hadn't slept a wink, and she was still too frightened to even go look for her breakfast.

"Oh, Peter Rabbit, did you hear that terrible noise last night?" she cried.

"What noise?" asked Peter, just as if he didn't know anything about it.

"Why that terrible voice!" cried little Miss Fuzzytail, and shivered at the thought of it.

"What was it like?" asked Peter.

"Oh, I can't tell you," said little Miss Fuzzytail. "It wasn't like anything I ever heard before. It was something like a voice of Hooty the Owl and the voice of Dippy the Loon and the voice of a little yelping dog all in one, and it was just terrible!"

"Oh," replied Peter, "you must mean the voice of my friend Old Man Coyote. He came up here last night just to do me a good turn, because I once did him a good turn. Then he told all about how Old Man C[illegible] came to the Green Meadows to live, and how he was smarter than [illegible] Sammy Fox, but he didn't tell her how he himself had once been frightened almost to death at a year's growth by that terrible voice, or that it was because he hadn't really believed that Old Man Coyote was his friend that he had led him to leave the old briar patch and come up to the Old Pasture.

"Is—is he fond of Rabbits" asked little Miss Fuzzytail.

Peter was quite sure that he was.

"And do you think he'll come up here hunting again?" she asked.

Peter didn't know, but he suspected that he would.

"Oh, dear," wailed little Miss Fuzzytail, "Now, I never, never will feel safe again!"

Then Peter had a happy thought. "I tell you what," said he, "the safest place in the world for you and me is my dear old briar patch. Won't you go there now?"

Little Miss Fuzytail sighed and dropped a tear or two. Then she nestled up close to Peter. "Yes," she whispered.

The Evening Story

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Wenger.)

Miss Betsy, laden with the fruits of her morning's marketing, was taking a longer walk than usual. She was going clear round by Pink street, though she well knew that her neighbors and acquaintances would have stared in disdain to see her there. It was not disreputable, but unfashionable. That was why Miss Betsy had moved away.

She had been made to do so by her dominating younger sister Clementine, and she had never ceased to be sorry. Now, as she entered the beloved, dearly familiar thoroughfare, her steps faltered, her eyes dimmed with eager remembrance. It was the street where Miss Betsy had been born and where she had lived all her life till half a dozen years before. She had walked the sidewalks as a child, as a girl, and as a woman. In joy and heartbreak, in hope and disillusion. Each and everything bore witness to her of the sweet and sad things of her life.

Past the double array of dingy houses Miss Betsy passed and came at last to the dingiest of all—and the dearest. She paused at the gate to gaze at it. The May bush beside the feeble porch was budding.

"It's grown a yard higher," she thought. "And that biggest branch was the littlest when we lived here. I wonder if the orioles ever build in the old maple now. I see the daffodils back there have come up as usual. I'd like to know if they've blossomed this year. I thought they needed attention last fall. That was the last time I was here. Walking isn't so easy for me as it once was."

She sighed and rubbed the gate post with her finger. "It needs fresh paint, but I guess it'll have to do without for a spell yet," she thought. "Clementine wants another piece of mahogany. She'll have it, of course. And there goes the paint money. Well, this paint has hung on well. And the folks don't seem very particular. I wish they'd pay a little faster. They're quite a good deal back on their contract, Lawyer Birdsall says. And we need the money to live on. It seems like eating up the body of a friend to live on the old place this way. I wouldn't care if we'd just rented it. But Clementine wouldn't hear to that. 'If you rent it you'll want to go back to it,' she said. Maybe she was right. Maybe I would. I can't go back to it now, for it's sold on a contract. And there's the house we live in. Well, I must go on, Clementine's expecting me." She hoisted up the net bag, heavy with parcels, and started to move on.

"Betsy! Betsy Bush!"

The cracked old voice behind her made her turn quickly.

"Dorinda's been watching you out of the window," said an old man. "She sent me to see if it was you. We ain't seen you in so long we most weren't sure. How do you do, Betsy? How's sister? Ain't you coming in to see us? Stay to dinner, Betsy. Seems like you might. You ain't been on this street before in I don't know how long.

"Steven White, you're the fastest talker I ever heard," Miss Betsy said, smiling. "But it's good to hear you again, I declare. You and Dorinda never get over on our street, do you?"

"Landy, no! You're too stylish for us in that big house and all. How'd you like your big house, Betsy? How's Clementine like it?"

"Clementine likes it. But I can't come in this time, Steven, and I can't stay. I just slipped away long enough to get a peep at things over here. I'm not as good a walker as I once was, and I keep in the house more. But I don't forget if I don't come. I guess I don't!" She averted her face lest Steven see the tear on her cheek.

"Good-by, Steven. Take my love and plenty of it to your wife. Tell her I wish I was right back here beside her. Tell her—oh, pshaw! What's the use? Good-by, Steven."

She went on as hastily as her parcels, her rheumatism and her tear-blinded eyes would let her. "Sometimes," she thought, "I feel like I'd never go near that place again, it upsets me so. Clementine can't understand, it, but then she's sixteen years younger and different besides. Home never meant one-half to her what it does to me."

It was a weary way home. The Bush house stood on a broad and cleanly thoroughfare and had three stories and was Venetian-blinded and specially corniced. Miss Betsy went round to the kitchen door. She flung her bag upon the table and sank upon a chair. An inner door opened and Clementine appeared. Clementine was tall, black-eyed, vivacious. She was youthfully clad in blue linen.

"I thought I saw you pass the window," she said. She glanced at the bag on the table. "Oh, dear! I wish you would not carry things home. It looks so common. I'm sure Mrs. Cannon saw you."

"There are some things that need to go in the icebox," Betsy replied.

"Oh, dear!" Clementine began to haul forth the parcels. "I should say there were. Lettuce! Fancy your carrying lettuce through Main street."

"I didn't come through Main street."

"Don't tell me you've been way round by Pink street!"

"What if I did?" Betsy hurriedly rose. She felt stiff in the knees from her tramp. But it was near lunch time. They must have lunch and Clementine would not know how to get it. "I'm so sorry you went way round by Pink street," Clementine said. "Mr. Birdsall is coming to lunch. You'll be too tired to do anything!"

"Oh, no, I sha'n't," Betsy answered.

"IT'S HOME," SHE ADDED SOFTLY.

It occurred to her that Mr. Birdsall came very often to lunch and he did not always have business to talk over with her. But that was evidently Clementine's affair.

During luncheon Betsy was silent, while Clementine vivaciously entertained the elderly bachelor lawyer. After luncheon Clementine took him away to the parlor and Miss Betsy cleared the table and washed the dishes. She worked as unsparingly as if that were the first task of the day for her. When all was in order she crept up the back stairs and sought her quiet, little back room that when the house was planned had been set aside for a maid.

In it were the old things Betsy had brought from a similar room in the old house. The tufted counterpane, the crocheted bureau mats, the rug carpet, and the old-fashioned pictures were strongly reminiscent of the old home. In this room, surrounded by these things Miss Betsy was as happy as she ever expected to be on this side of eternity.

Entering, she felt restraint slip from her, and she lay down upon the tufted counterpane. A gray-brown bird lighted on the window ledge and peered at her through the glass. She smiled at it.

"Pretty little creeter," she said. "Birds ain't so common here as they were on Pink street. The motors and such scare them away. Dear old home!" She snuggled deeper into her pillow. "Maybe it's wicked to hate this house the way I do. But I never wanted it. It was Clementine's doing. She was bound to be fashionable. And she couldn't be stylish anywhere but in this house. It cost so much—too much. We've had to pinch and skimp and squeeze to make an appearance. I don't know how it will end. I'm getting discouraged. I'm getting tuckered out mentally trying to contrive and plan. Clementine never did have any head for business. And I'm getting too old."

And then, somehow, she found herself back in the old house. Around her were all the precious belongings that had looked so out of place in the new house and had annoyed Clementine so terribly. And there was Dorinda, so big and smiling, hobbling in on her crutch and saying "Betsy Bush! Betsy! Wake up."

Gone was the old house and Dorinda. It was only a dream, and Clementine was awakening her. "Are you awake, Betsy?" she demanded. "When you are I've got something to tell you."

"I'm awake," Betsy said, sitting up. "Well, then, listen! I don't know whether you've ever thought that Mr. Birdsall had any other reason than business in coming here. But he had. I was the reason. He has asked me to marry him. I'm going to, of course." Clementine came around to

HOME

AMERICAN FASHIONS

By Lillian Young.

It always seems as if each summer brings forth handsomer embroideries than before, probably because there are so many pleasing dress designs by which they can be made up to the best advantage. The English eyelet and the fine Madeira embroideries have been almost perfectly reproduced in machine-made pieces, and for a real summery lingerie frock nothing could be nicer.

Handkerchief linen, with quite an openwork embroidery pattern, is used for the frock of the accompanying sketch. Being made on more conservative lines than the general run of embroidered frocks, it is one which can be worn with impunity in the street on warm summer afternoons and for a restaurant gown in the evenings. The fronts of the blouse have the embroidery running across the lower part, forming a border above the belt. The arrangement is the same in back. Long sleeves, with deep cuffs, are set into lowered armholes. The blouse is left open in front, disclosing a folded vest of black satin, and above that a little crossover tucker of net. There is a double outside collar of self material.

The tunic skirt is quite long, with the embroidery running about it midway. It is mounted at the waist with an even line of gathering and finished around its lower edge with white bail fringe. The underskirt is perfectly plain, with a deep hem.

Black satin is used for the handsome sash girdle, wound around the waist and down below one hip, with the ends finished with metal pendants.

the bed and sat down. "Kiss me, Betsy," she said.

Betsy kissed her gently. "I'm very glad, dear."

"I didn't know whether you'd be or not. You're so much older and different, Betsy. And marriage never seemed to be in your line somehow. Mr. Birdsall said he never saw two sisters so unlike as we are. I told him that while we'd never agreed, we'd never quarrelled. Matters always got adjusted between us some way. Like this house how—" She stopped. "That makes me think. Mr. Birdsill said that those Pink street people are going to throw up their contract. Mr. Birdsill said he was pretty sure he could sell it again immediately."

A feverish light sprang into Betsy's eyes. "No, no," she cried. "I don't want it sold. I—"

"What are you going to do, Betsy?"

Betsy smiled. Her dream possessed her. "I'm going there to live. You can have this house, you and Mr. Birdsill. Don't speak just yet, Clementine. Let me. I'll take roomers for company. There'll be plenty of space downstairs for me. And the old stuff will furnish it. Don't you see, Clementine?"

"Yes, I see," mused Clemantine, frowning. "But it looks unnecessary. The house is plenty big enough for all of us. I don't see what you want to go back on Pink street for. And to that old house. It's really a horrid old house, Betsy."

"Maybe," said Betsy. She drew a deep, hungry breath. Her eyes widened with happy visions of the future—unClementined, peaceful, living in her own way under the dearest roof tree in the world. "It's home," she added, softly.

And she did not wonder that Clementine looked puzzled. For it would be sixteen years yet before Clemantine learned all that word meant.

Perfume With the Breeze

(Baltimore Evening Sun.)

A small but very powerful electric fan just put on the market is a distinct novelty in that it has a concealed vaporizer attached to the motor.

This attachment, placed behind the blades of the fan in such a way that it does not interfere in the slightest with the production of a breeze, is so powerful that any scent placed in it permeates the room almost immediately after the fan is put in motion.

The new device is designed to make a special appeal to the feminine contingent and may be to advantage in sleeping and living rooms.

Our Thoughtful Sons

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

Father and son were sitting on the porch step with the lawn mower a few feet away. They looked at each other. Then they looked at the mower.

"Dad," said the youngster, "you're getting too stout."

"Am I?"

"Sure. It's a pity, too. Jack Perkins told me yesterday that his dad had reduced his waist measure four inches."

"How?"

"Pushing the lawn mower."

There was a brief silence. Then the son got up and went into the house for his tennis racket, and dad arose and tackled the mower.

"MOST BEAUTIFUL ACTRESS" TO PORTRAY "LITTLE DORRIT" IN NEW MOVIE CLASSIC

BY GERTRUDE M. PRICE.

Maude Fealy has gone into the "movies!"

It is no longer a favor for a well-known theatrical star to appear in a moving picture.

It is the thing for each one to have had at least one brief engagement with some reputable picture company.

Telling experiences of "how I felt when I acted before the camera" has come to be the popular gossip among these notable folk who think it is quite right and proper that some of their favorite plays should be recorded, for future generations, in the clever, little, compact film of a picture machine.

So it is not surprising to hear that Maude Fealy, heralded by many as the most beautiful woman of the stage, has added her name to the list of stars who are doing something for the "movie" public.

Miss Fealy has been engaged by the Thanhouser moving picture company as the big feature attraction in the leading roles of a series of "movie" classics, to be released in the early fall.

She is working with the regular Thanhouser company at New Rochelle, New York.

The forerunner of this big new venture is "King Rene's Daughter." The first of the regular series is "Little Dorrit," Charles Dickens' famous story. In the very early stages of the play the "Thanhouser Kid" takes the part of "Little Dorrit." Then Miss Fealy steps in and carries the pretty title role to the end.

Of course, you remember Miss Fealy in stock; as the star in "The Stronger Sex"; as Nell Gwyn in "Mistress Nell," and with William Gillette and Henry Irving's company abroad.

She has no intention of giving up the stage, it is said. But she does think that it is possible for all players to learn a great deal from a careful study of their own action as seen in a moving picture.

Though the engagement down at quiet New Rochelle is something of a summer lark for her, she always comes back from a close inspection of the first exhibit of one of her own productions with a "new wrinkle," which she laughingly declares she has learned from it.

Two Double Bills in Two Days--New Hurlers to Receive Trial

Dobbs Scraps Mobile Club; Barons Climb

Series Between Two Leading Clubs Will Have Big Bearing on Pennant Race—Crackers Should Get Higher

With just a little over one game's difference, Montgomery and Mobile get together Friday in the first of a series of games which will have a most important bearing upon the final outcome of the Southern league race. Both teams have been going well of late and are ready to enter this big series, both managers being confident that they will get away with a majority of games.

The series is to be played at Montgomery and should the Gulls be able to take two of the three games, the clubs will be tied for the lead when the battles are over. Such an outcome will be a big help to the Atlanta and Birmingham clubs, both of whom are now fighting hard to get right in the thick of the running. Some weeks ago it was predicted in The Journal that the Baron club would be right in the thick of the fight before the month of July was passed and this has certainly come true. At the time such a prediction was handed out the Barons were down near the cellar with apparently no chance to come up, but a few changes in the club has worked wonders and right now the team is going fine.

While the Barons are fighting the Chattanooga Lookouts and the Crackers are fighting the Vols the local club is given an excellent chance to climb. The Vol outfit should be much easier to handle than the Lookouts and it would not be surprising at all to see the Crackers pass the Barons ere the week is over. Molesworth was able to shove into third place during the road trip of the Crackers. The return of the Crackers to the stand just under second place is now in order.

The Mobile hurlers have been going good of late and it is more than probable that the Gulls will win the series from Montgomery even though the games are being played on the home grounds of the Dobbers. Cavet, Campbell Horg and Berger form a mighty good combination for a hurling staff and should they keep up their sterling work of the past few weeks the Dobbers will have to hurry to hold the lead.

Use Thompson and G. Price

As a continuance of the festivities started in Thursday's slaughter the Crackers will Friday meet the Vols in two games.

The Crackers' new line-up seems to be turning the trick, and with the encouragement of the fair fans who will turn out Friday afternoon the Crackers should do great things.

Carl Thompson and Gil Price will be the selection of Manager Smith, while Williams and More will probably work for Nashville.

The games will be called at the usual double-header time, 2:15 o'clock.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Atlanta in fourth place is only sixty points behind Montgomery in first. By reason of the Barons' loss the Atlanta team climbed within four points of Birmingham.

Chicago again took one from the Giants, Marquard was forced from the mound. The Phillies are, however, still winning.

Cleveland still has a death grip on second place and are climbing slowly.

COBB VS. JACKSON

Joe Jackson slumped in Thursday's double bill. He was up six times and failed to hit. Cobb hit two out of four times up.

Good Prices Are Offered For Holland

Before the Youngster Put on Uniform He Was Sought by Major League Teams, One Offering $3,000

Harry Holland continues to be sought by the major league clubs. His signing with the Crackers has not caused the majors to cease their efforts to land him for work next season and only Wednesday the Philadelphia Americans made an offer of $3,000 for the young collegian.

The fact that the majors are yet seeking the boy shows that he is well thought of and will prove a star. The offer from Connie Mack was made before the ex-Tech star had put on a Cracker uniform or played a professional engagement. The Atlanta club thinks a lot of the new prize and the offer from Mack was promptly turned down.

In the game Thursday Holland did not hit safely, yet he popped the ball hard each time up and continued hard hitting will surely get the bingles. And in the field there is no doubt about his making good.

Ten-Mile Final In Big Event At Motordrome

Two Big Races in Which All Riders Will Participate and Special Match Race Feature Friday's Program

The Atlanta sweepstakes with the final heat ten miles is the big feature offered at the motordrome for Friday evening. This time it looks as if Jack Prince will win out in his fight against old J. P., which will enable him to get away with two races this week, something that in the past has been unheard of.

On the card for Friday evening every class of motor fans will find plenty of enjoyment. There is the big motordrome purse, of three heats and the final; a special match race between Harry Glenn and Shields, and the Atlanta sweepstakes with two two-mile final heats and a ten-mile final in which five riders will participate.

The big spill at Cincinnati a couple of nights ago has caused the promoters of the local track to take extra precaution to again test out the local track and see that it is in fine shape. The riders here are all nervy enough, but they wish to know that they are riding upon a safe track as the local saucer has been proven.

In the race for the motordrome purse there will be three heats of one mile each with three riders in two of the heats and four in the other. The final will be for two miles with the five riders who made the fastest time in the trial heats. Then will come the special match race between Glenn and Shields. This will be for two miles, the best two in three heats. After that will come the big sweepstakes event. The two trial heats will be for one mile with the final going ten. This will bring five riders on the track in each heat and make it exciting.

Here is the program in full:

FIRST EVENT.

Motordrome Purse—Three one-mile qualifying heats—final two miles: First heat, Graves, Swartz, Shields.

SECOND EVENT.

Second heat, motordrome purse: Lochner, Richards, Luther.

THIRD EVENT.

Third heat, motordrome purse: Reed, McNell, Lewis, Glenn.

FOURTH EVENT.

Special match race, first heat, between Glenn and Shields. Distance, two miles. Best two heats in three.

FIFTH EVENT.

Final of motordrome purse, two miles. First in each heat and second man in fastest heat to start.

SIXTH EVENT.

Special match race, second heat, between Glenn and Shields.

SEVENTH EVENT.

Atlanta sweepstakes.—Two one-mile trial heats and ten-mile final:

First Heat—Graves, Richards, Swartz, Lewis, Lochner.

EIGHTH EVENT.

Second heat Atlanta sweepstakes: Reed, Shields, Glenn, Luther, McNell.

NINTH EVENT.

Third heat of match race between Glenn and Shields, if necessary.

TENTH EVENT.

Final heat of Atlanta sweepstakes—ten miles. First and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat to start.

GOOD BOXERS TO WORK IN BOUTS IN ATLANTA

Lou Castro Turns Boxing Promoter and Will Stage Good Matches

Once more the thud of the padded mitt on glowing flesh will resound in Atlanta. Count Lou Castro, the well-known figure in local sporting circles, has laid plans for promoting bouts for the coming season.

He has rented the Ponce de Leon skating rink for a year and he proposes to put on a bout about every two weeks. Already he has begun work on the rink with the view of converting it into a palace of turf.

In the beginning Lou has made a good move. For his first bout he proposes to match Charley White with Frank Whitney. These two boys should put up a good fight, and should make a good opener for Castro's schedule.

This first bout will be held on Wednesday night, August 13.

Charley White is a lightweight of known ability. He put Joe Thomas, who is popular with the local fans on sleep in short order, and in the past he has indulged in some scraps with the best. On his last appearance in Atlanta, he stopped Jake Abel in short order, demonstrating that he was far superior to the Chattanooga boy.

His opponent, Frank Whitney, is also popular with the Atlanta bugs, having fought several times in local arenas.

Lou Castro made a second wise move when he staged Charley Lee and Kid Young for a ten-round preliminary. These two boys were going to put a great clip when their last bout was stopped, and it looked as if the newsboy champ was going to suffer his first K. O. The decision giving the local to Lee on a foul, however, left a doubt in the minds of many fans as to who would really have won the fight had it gone the full ten-round limit.

If these two boys really get together to fight their difference out, the bout should be a good one.

Castro is after Jack Britton for an all-star card for this month, and if he lands the speedy lightweight, the winner of the Whitney-White match will be given a crack at him. White proved a tough nut for Britton to crack before, and if they meet again, or if Frank Whitney proves superior to White, Britton will have his hands full.

Eight Tallies In One Round

Beck Pitched Well Until the Eighth—Good Game Hurled by Elliott Dent

Hitting 'em when the runners were on the bags won the opening home game for Atlanta and the Nashville Vols proved the victims. The count was just 10-3, the locals getting next to Beck for eight runs in the eighth.

Elliott Dent lived up to his reputation as a hot weather hurler. Errors paved the way for the Vol tallies, Dent never being in any danger through poor hitting. He was cool all the way and had his curve ball working in the best shape of the year.

Playing baseball is an art with Izzy Bisland. This lad can get 'em at most any old spot and my, how he tries after everything hit in his direction. He came through with the prettiest stop ever seen on the local grounds in the seventh, when he chased over back of third and stopped Perry's hard rap. It looked impossible until it had actually been done.

Harry Holland didn't look half bad. He stands right up to the plate and can hit the ball. He did not register a safety in Thursday's game yet he hit one at third so hot that only perfect fielding cut it short of a double. And Harry has the confidence.

Agler made a most neat stab at first in the opening round in catching Dent's wild heave to first on Cal's bunt. It took all the speed out of the ball and hold his foot on the bag.

Harry Welchonce and Tommy Long were right there with the willow. Just three each and they hit when the raps counted for tallies.

Harry Chapman continues to catch good ball. And his pegging to the bags is well nigh perfect. He caught every effort to steal and in Thursday's fracas, getting them by a mile as the result of perfect pegs. He also made several neat catches of high fouls.

Wallace Smith is not a Whitey Alperman at fielding the second bag but he gets there just the same. He does not appear to know all the finer points of the position, but he is in there trying, and if anybody can learn how to play th esack it is the same Wally. He is a real ball player.

Outfielder Holtz looks mighty good. He fields well and seems able to hit the ball. He was right on the job all the while in his first game before the home folks.

HOW CLUBS PLAY TODAY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 1.—After a rest of two days the Memphis team will begin a final series on the local grounds for the season with New Orleans today. Four games will be played, a double-header being the offering for Sunday.

Today's probable batteries for Memphis, Parsons and Seabough, and for New Orleans, Brenton and Allen. The weather is warm and threatening.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 1.—The league leaders will clash today in the first of three battles which may alter the relative standing of the clubs. Interest in Montgomery is intense in the series and record crowds are promised at both games.

The Mobile team arrived this morning in splendid condition. Manager Mike Finn positively refused to announce his pitcher for today's game, but the impression prevails that Cavet will go to the mound. Schmidt will catch for the visitors.

Manager Dobbs had not returned from a two days' hunt early today but it was indicated that Bell, Brown or C. Brown would be in the box for Montgomery with Donohue behind the bat.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 1.—Willie Prough will pitch for Birmingham this afternoon while Chattanooga will put in Kroh. As the teams have each won a game the contest today promises to be spirited. Hardgrove, a local pitcher hurt yesterday by a batted ball, will probably return to the slab Saturday. Weather clear and warm.

Batting Figures

Thursday's swat-fest at Beck's expense was highly profitable to the Crackers' averages. Welchonce and Long took a fiver for a few points. Smith also got a better stand on the .300 side.

Weston Nears End

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 1.—Within twenty-nine miles of the end of his walk from New York to Minneapolis, Edward Payson Weston left Stillwater, Minn., today expecting to arrive in St. Paul late this afternoon. He will remain here tonight and depart for Minneapolis tomorrow morning.

SITTON HURLS NO HIT; ONCE WITH ATLANTA

Only Three Batters Reached First Off Ex-Cracker Hurler, and All Walked

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Pitcher Vedder Sitton, of the Troy club of the New York State league, shut out Wilkesbarre without a hit Thursday afternoon. Not one of the visiting players reached second base and only three reached first, each on a base on balls.

Vedder Sitton was once a star hurler in the Southern league, being with both the Atlanta and Nashville clubs. With each he hurled jam-up ball and it was only with the close of the 1912 season that he was turned adrift by the Cracker management, being sent to the Troy club.

Sitton first cam einto prominence in the baseball world as a pitcher for the Clemson college team. He did such good work for this bunch of Carolinians that he was signed by Nashville and made good with a rush. It was his great work in the final game of the season against New Orleans which gave the Vols a pennant back about 1908.

With Atlanta last season Sitton gave a good account of himself but was turned adrift as he had been this season too long for his own good. While here he pitched many good games and yet failed to bring out the successor of Maurice E. McLoughlin, the famous internationalist, who is the holder of the title. In the first round Perry defeated Ray Thompson, Tacoma, Wash., 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STARRED

Joe Jackson spent six hitless periods at bat.

Sil mSalles lost a game by a one-run margin. He went in with the score against St. Louis and so does not get credit for a loss.

Dode Paskert pasted three out of five trials.

Napoleon Rucker was defeated by the Pirate crew. He was removed from the firing line in the seventh round with eight dents in his delivery.

Zach Wheat was up three times, but could only drop one safely.

Jake Daubert, who is getting back in the regular swim, batted .666 by hitting two out of three times up.

Red Smith drew a goose egg in the hit column and a "two" in at bats.

Bobby Byrne is back at his old position as leader of the Pirates' batting order. He hit safely once in four trials.

Mike Balenti broke into the line-up as left fielder for St. Louis. He hit safely once in four times up.

Derrill Pratt got an even break, hitting two out of four.

ALPERMAN IS DOING WELL

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 1.—Captain Whitey Alperman, of the Atlanta club, was today declared out of danger by the surgeon in attendance, H. T. Inge.

"Whitey" will probably be in Mobile for ten or twelve days longer, and then return to Atlanta.

Of course it is out of the question for him to play any more baseball this season. But he has been retired at full pay by the club.

Many Players Enter N. Y. Tennis Tourney

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Lawn tennis players began the matches in the New York state championship tournament Thursday on the turf courts at Bay Ridge. W. M. Johnston, the young Californian, won his first match, 6-1, 7-5 against Guy Nankivel, of the Orazani Field club of Hackensack, N. J.

G. W. Waring, Columbia, S. C., easily defeated R. C. Peardon, 6-1, 6-4.

Splendid progress was made as the field of 97 players was reduced by half and all the first round practically cleared to bring out the successor of Maurice E. McLoughlin, the famous internationalist, who is the holder of the title. In the first round Perry defeated Ray Thompson, Tacoma, Wash., 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

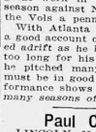
Paul Cobb Signed

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 1.—Paul Cobb, brother of Tyrus Cobb, of the Detroit Americans, recently given an unconditional release by the Lincoln Western league club, has signed with the Ogden, Utah, team of the Union association. Cobb is an outfielder. He will join the Ogden team at once.

BUNTS AND BINGLES

BY JULIAN MURPHEY



Custer's last stand is going to have nothing on the attempt of the Atlanta club to finish right up in the front rank of the Southern league. Bill Smith has determination in his eye and he is out to do the right ing to get results.

When the road trip was finished it looked rather bad for the local outfit but when it is considered that the club plays six series on the home lot right at the close of the year it is not half bad. You know many a pennant has been won at the tail end of a season and the Cracker crew is out to begin climbing with the big series here this week and after holding its own on a short road trip come home for the final spurt.

TEAM APPEARS STRONG.

The team as it now stands looks fairly strong. Of course Alperman is to be missed. He would be missed on anybody's ball club. Yet the addition of Holland and Holtz and the rounding to form of the hurlers and increased hitting by the batters don't make it look as bad as some would have you think. Harry Holland of course is no Ty Cobb but he is a promising young ball player who appears able to fill in a hole at a critical moment.

Ahead of the Atlanta club at the present writing are two clubs that should be shoved down the ladder a bit to their normal position and these are Montgomery and Mobile. Both are good ball clubs, there is no use in denying that, yet they are not playing any better than hitting crew now working in Atlanta. The only respect in which they have it over the Crackers is teamwork and ability to get along with each other.

The Birmingham club right now stacks up as one of the very best in the league. At the start Molesworth was weak but the addition of McDonald and Kniseley and the rounding to form of his hurling staff has served to make his club most formidable and it can be stated that Moley is going to be right in the running until the last man is out. And Atlanta should be in there right with the Barons.

ALREADY AFTER HOLLAND.

Some few old time fans appear a bit peeved that Harry Holland, a youngster, should have been signed by the Crackers when the team is weakened by the loss of such vets as Alperman and Bailey. But just take a tip to the effect that Holland is just as good a player as could have been secured to plug in the sap on the infield. This boy is a real ball player.

In making the statement that Holland is a finished ball player and is sure to be heard from some day I am not furnishing my own opinion but those of baseball scouts who are paid big salaries by major league teams. These scouts are all believed to be good at judging the ability of a young player and every one of them have been after Holland and only Wednesday one major league team offered $3,000 for the young collegian. And this before he had ever put on a Cracker uniform. Suppose that doesn't look half bad.

LaGrange Gets Away With Opelika Club

LAGRANGE, Ga., Aug. 1.—In a very sensational game LaGrange defeated Opelika by a score of 3 to 2. Both teams used two pitchers in an effort to save the game. LaGrange using Beasley and Bannister and Opelika using Williams and Cauley.

During the progress of the game two LaGrange players engaged in a fist fight over the players' bench, which created quite a little excitement, but they were separated before any serious damage was done.

Jackson Hits Oftener When on Home Field

Only in Philadelphia Is He Held to Any Low Average, Twice This Season He Has Cleaned the Bags

Joe Jackson has hit .400 or better on four diamonds this year, the fields being those of Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit and Boston. At home the slugging southerner up to last Monday had piled up an average of .441, in the Windy City his record was .419, and in Detroit and Boston it was an even .400. Jackson, on his visits to St. Louis, has walloped the sphere at a .303 clip; at the Polo grounds his record is .333 and at Shibe park it is .133.

The clouting Clevelander, who ranked ninth in the competition for the Chalmers car last season, and who is likely to rank higher this season if he keeps up his present timely stickwork, possibly would set a world's record for a batting percentage could he stay at home and bat only against the Washington pitchers. Jackson has torn off 16 safeties in the seven games the Senators have played in Cleveland this year and he only has been at bat 23 times, the extremely high percentage of .694 being the result of his activities against Walter Johnson & Co. Jackson collected five hits in the two full games the Idaho phenom pitched against the Naps in Cleveland and his percentage for the season against Sir Walter is .456.

Jackson has hit at a .531 clip against the Browns on his home field, .471 against Boston, .412 against New York, .400 against Detroit, .296 against Chicago and .286 against Philadelphia. Up to last Monday he had made forty runs and seventy-nine hits in the Forest City and twenty-four tallies and thirty-nine safeties on foreign diamonds. Of the forty-four long wallops then to his credit, twenty-eight were manufactured in Charles W. Somers' ball orchard and the rest in other parks.

Jackson has twice this year come to the bat with the bases full and emptied the sacks of all their inhabitants. The first cruel blow the southerner struck was in the game of May 10 with the Boston Red Sox. Then he tripled against Charley Hall. The next day the Highlanders played th eNaps and in the first inning Jackson hit for the circuit against Heinie Schulz, making two clean-up clouts for him in as many days. On April 30 Jackson drove in both the runs his team made in the game with Chicago which the Naps won, 2 to 1, and on May 19 he was responsible for three of his team's four tallies against Washington, this also being a Cleveland victory.

Jackson last season led his team in driving in runs and this season it looks as if he would again show the way to his mates. During the first season he has put the finishing touches to fifty-eight counters, batting in fifty-two of these on safe hits, two on sacrifice flies and four on infield outs.

CUNNINGHAM IS WORKING

Coach W. A. Cunningham was in the city on Thursday on his way north on a pleasure trip. He was looking well and in fine spirits.

Coach Cunningham stated that he was glad to see yesterday's story as to the football rules, as he was well satisfied with the present system of playing the game, and thought that Georgia has as much chance under the present rules of downing Tech next fall as they would under other rules.

Highest Priced Horse Proving Disappointment

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Prince Palatine, the horse for which J. B. Joel, the South African capitalist, paid the record price of $250,000 this week, has proved something of a disappointment in its initial race as the costliest face horse in the world. In the race for the Goodwood cup yesterday, although there were only six runners, Prince Palatine failed to finish among the first three, reaching the winning post in a distressed condition. Joel's disappointment, however, is somewhat relieved by the fact that a condition upon which he purchased the horse from T. Pilkinton was that if the horse was beaten in any of its engagements this season $25,000 would be deducted from the purhase price.

Study Training Methods

(By Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—It is reported that a committee of German athletic authorities has arranged to sail for the United States soon to study the training methods there with a view to helping Germany win in the Olympic games in Berlin in 1916.

The committee plans to remain for some time in New York and then tour the western states, visiting all the leading universities. A special investigation will be made of the methods in vogue at the army and navy schools.

It is expected that one of the best American trainers will be engaged to come here as adviser to the German Olympic trainers.

Youth Shares Tennis Titles

Brilliant Young California Player Has to Default Owing to Illness

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—In a brilliant tourney, featured by unexpected victories of two "dark horses," and a thrilling match between Clarence Griffin, of California, and Heath Byford, of Chicago, the western tennis championship meet at Lake Forest has reached its semi-finals. Friday Griffin will play William Blair, of Lake Geneva, who turned one of the big upsets of the tournament in downing John Adams, of Minneapolis.

John Strachan, who was ill, defaulted his match to L. Harry Waldner, the Chicago veteran. Waldner meets Joe Armstrong, of St. Paul, in the semi-finals. Armstrong eliminated Walter T. Hayes, runner-up in last year's tournament.

Armstrong's brilliancy perhaps outshone that of any of the other five players in the fifth round, but it was only slightly superior to that shown by young Griffin and Byford. Summaries:

Fifth round:

L. Harry Waldner, Chicago, defeated John Strachan, San Francisco (default).

Joseph J. Armstrong, St. Paul, defeated Walter Hayes, Chicago, 6-4, 7-5.

Clarence Griffin, San Francisco, defeated Heath Byford, Chicago, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

William Blair, Lake Geneva, defeated John Adams, Minneapolis, 6-4, 6-4.

Valdosta Gets Season's Best

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 1.—In probably the best game played on the local field this season Valdosta defeated Americus, 2 to 0.

The game was full of sensational fielding by both teams, four fast double plays were pulled off, one by Americus and three by the locals. Medlock hit a three-bagger to right and scored when Utter lost the ball in a small patch of weeds in the field corner of the park.

The teams have each won, both games being played in Moultrie. The next game, the final of the series, will be played in Boston and the local team expects to be the winner. The batteries were: Boston, Vann and Pope; Moultrie, Elrod and Scarborough.

Leach Cross After Ritchie for a Fight

Leach Cross, the Ghetto champion of New York, whose real name is Louis Wallach, is after Willie Ritchie for a fight for lightweight championship. His careful fight with Bud Anderson, the young western terror, who was looked on as a comer, has placed him among those entitled to a fight for the lightweight championship. It is possible that he and Ritchie will be signed for Labor day.

But if Leach got the championship he would have to do some clever dodging to hold it. Jack Britton, who has beaten him, would take it away if they met. Packie McFarland, too, would take it away if he could get down to the proper weight.

Cross has a heavy straight right hand punch, which carries a knockout. He also has a powerful left hook. If he lands on Ritchie he will win. But there are not many fight experts who think he would land.

Polo Players Are Selected

The Atlanta Polo club will be given its first impetus when the Seventeenth regiment team at Fort McPherson meet crack Atlanta players.

A good bunch of ponies have been shipped here for the game, and the selection of the players guarantees that the match will be a good one. The men who will wear the Atlanta colors are Captain J. O. Seamans, of the Governor's Horse Guard; Albert S. J. Tucker, of Lexington, Va.; E. M. Landrum, of Pensacola, Fla., and Milton Wise, of New York.

In addition to the polo game there will be the usual army games and music.

Many prominent society people are intersting themselves in the formation of a southern circuit with a polo team here. Some prominent Atlantians will officiate. Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox will time; Wilmer L. Moire will score and James R. Gray and Clark Howell will be judges.

TO STOP LONG SPRINTS IN ALL BIG REGATTAS

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Although shells and sweeps are already collecting dust on boat house racks, the sectional regatta, which closed the varsity rowing season are still a topic of conversation and controversy where university men gather.

Regardless of whether it is the races at New London or Poughkeepsie that are reviewed, there appears to be more than the usual difference of opinion relative to the merits and methods of the various crews and coaches and the outlook for the seasons to come. Paradoxical as it may seem, there is a complaint that there is not enough racing on the Thames and too much on the Hudson.

Incidentally it can be stated that the 1914 regatta will witness a number of changes in both rowing tactics, methods and coaching. If the veteran oarsmen of the universities most interested are to be believed, there will be no four-mile sprint next year.

In fact, it is likely that the first two miles of the varsity race will be more or less of a loaf, so explicit and forceful will the coaches' instructions be on this point. The elimination of the four-oared varsity crew in favor of junior eights will also find favor. This change provides places for four additional oarsmen not quite varsity type, yet worthy of a place on the regatta program.

It will also do away with the racing shells without coxswains which have caused accidents and disputes for years.

At least one new coach will be seen on the Hudson, for Pennsylvania has secured Vivian Nichalls to succeed Ellis Ward as rowing coach. Nichalls, who has signed a three-year contract, will take charge of the Quaker crew candidates next autumn. He is one of England's most famous oarsmen, being a member of the Leander Rowing club of London, an Oxford university graduate and former holder of the diamond sculls and Winfield sculls.

Also a Pacific coast crew can be expected to cross the continent for the 1914 regatta, for Coach Conibear, of Washington, stated after the races that should the Seattle oarsmen win the Pacific coast championship they would enter the Hudson race next year.

Leland Stanford adopted the same plan in 1912, and the University of California stands ready to finance such a trip should the Berkeley oarsmen succeed in defeating both Washington and Stanford.

The outlook for rowing at New London is not so bright. Late reports from New Haven intimate that the English coaching system will be continued next season, and that Harcourt Gold, the Oxford university oarsman, will return to assist in the work. This report has not found favor with a number of old Yale grads, and Harvard men are beginning to grumble at the lack of competition afforded in recent years by Yale crews.

The situation was summed up as follows by a Harvard alumnus after the sweep of the Thames on June 20: "I know it sounds like heresy," he said, "but I am getting tired of these one-sided races. For more than five years now I have been spending good money going to New London to witness a one-mile race followed by a three-mile procession.

WAN

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Feed, Live Stock and Poultry.

PROBABLY there is no one thing that has kept the south from breeding or producing more poultry and live stock than for the want of feed, or for the high price that has to be paid for food to produce them with. It is impossible for any man to buy high priced western feed and put it into poultry or live stock and make a profit out of it. This has kept many a breeder from entering the business and has put thousands of breeders out of business that have undertaken it. It simply cannot be done and until this food is produced on the farm and converted through live stock into cash this industry will never prosper or amount to much in the south until we see this time come. Therefore, we will always be largely dependent on the west, the section that makes a specialty of producing food products of all kinds simply because they can supply Georgia and all the other southern states with most of their feod. On the other hand as much if not more pounds of food products can be produced on Georgia acres as on any other lands in the world. Yet, we will not raise this food. We prefer raising cotton instead and continue to make the western farmer rich. I don't believe any other state of affairs will ever change unless the boll weevil forces it on us. It has become a habit and second nature for Georgia to buy a large per cent of her feed and I guess we will always continue to do so.

Yet there is a great demand in this country for live stock, poultry and eggs of all kinds and if it could be raised on Georgia grown food the farmers could not help but convert it into a much larger per cent of profit with less labor and less worry than they can possibly take out of cotton. Hundreds of people have failed to make any money out of poultry simply because they could not afford to buy the high-priced feed and sustain them and sell their products in competition with the western products that were grown with home grown feed, and notwithstanding the western breeder could pay the comparatively high freight rate and then offer his products at less than we can do so. The same thing has practically applied to meat products until recently. They have become so high now that anyone can, by supplying at home even a part of our food products, make a handsome profit out of stock and then buy a part of his feed simply because we have to cotton seed meal and hulls the best and cheapest finishing food to make good beef with and milk and butter that was ever grown. But, when it comes to making a profit out of hogs, horses and poultry by feeding them exclusively western grown feed it is out of the question. It cannot be done and only for fancy, which is limited, can a man in the south make a profit out of poultry and hogs and have to buy all of his feed.

When the statistics are carefully looked over it looks like a shame that this state should send out of its borders every year the amount of money that we do for food products of all kinds, and it is a disgrace to the state to continue year by year to let this amount increase instead of decrease which it is gradually doing. We should grow more food and diversify our crops and take better care of our land which we could do if we kept more live stock and poultry, and by starting this work even in a small way and increasing y ar by year a change would come to us almost before we knew it and find this state with an abundance of feed that would be converted into cash if there was some way possible by which we could once get the people interested and get them in a habit of growing more feed than they have ever done before. To notice every day the train load after train load of food products coming into Georgia and the cars going back empty a person that notices this cannot help but see this wasteful method growing every day to such an extent that it is alarming, and as the records show during the last three years our state spending more and more for these things it is becoming a serious question that some effort should be made to change matters and not allow it to continue to exist.

Playing the Game
(Judge.)

It is well for the Wise Virgin to keep man ignorant of the fact that all her wicks are trimmed; it makes life easier.

Men aren't so quick to notice the things a woman has on as to detect the ones she hasn't on.

Matrimonially speaking, a girl has given up hope when she seriously considers a man who wears rubbers.

Women are masterful men—outside of the immediate family circle.

Women are more insistent that a woman listen to reason, he means listen to—him.

Women in the garden of life is never complete without at least one bleeding heart.

Love sharpens the wits, but dulls the judgment.

ANGIE OUSLEY.

The Amazing Case of John Doe
(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

The man mounted his motorcycle and glided from the curb.

He didn't linger until he had bruised the neighboring eardrums with a series of discordant snorts.

He rode away quietly and turned the corner at a dignified pace.

Seventeen minutes later he alighted at his place of business. He had covered the four miles without a mishap.

Nobody had been hurt, no children had been frightened, no sick people had been aroused, no policeman had threatened, no dogs had been bumped, nobody screamed, nobody growled, nobody swore.

"They said it couldn't be done," muttered the motorcyclist, and he smiled as he tested the machine into the storeroom.

There is a moral in this fairy tale.

OPPORTUNITY GRABS YOUR HAND

OPPORTUNITY is grabbing at the hand of every man who believes in Atlanta. The city offers more today to the real estate investor than ever before in its history. The wise man is he who makes his investments now.

There will be more money made on Spring street in the next 18 months than on any other thoroughfare in the city. It will duplicate the success of Ivy street. It presents now the same low priced opportunities as did Ivy street before the magic hand of Joel Hurt asserted itself.

SPRING AND SIMPSON STS.

At this point I offer three lots, as follows:

Corner lot 26x105 ft., $7,750.00
Next to corner 25x105 ft. $6,750.00
Adjoining lot 25x105 ft. $6,500.00

Terms ⅓ cash, balance 1, 2 and 3 years, at 6%.

Every one of these lots will show a profit of $150.00 per foot in one year's time. The live investor will not let this opportunity slide by. For a small amount of cash you can control one of these high-class, semi-central lots, possessing an assured enhancement.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

East Lake Drive Tract Brings $1,500 an Acre—Whitehall Avenue and Sutherland Terrace Sales—Building Value for July Is Behind That of Same Month in 1912—Many Tentative Offers Ready for Governor's Mansion Property

Some small transactions were again announced on Friday, with the unofficial announcement that one or two sales in semi-central territory would be announced in a day or so.

Conditions continue to improve gradually. The announcement from Washington that Secretary McAdoo would turn loose $50,000,000 in the south and west to relieve the anual fall money stringency incidental to moving crops—which will be unusually large this year—created a good feeling among real estate people, who felt more than ever hopeful of a good fall season.

ACREAGE SALE.

Walter G. Cooper has sold to J. B. McCray an eight-acre tract on the East Lake drive at Oakhurst for an aggregate of $12,000, or $1,500 an acre.

This tract is on the right of the road going towards East Lake. It is at the corner where the road, after leaving Oakhurst, turns almost at right angles. There is extensive frontage on both two thoroughfares. Mr. Cooper bought the property about a year ago.

OTHER SALES.

C. A. Virgin of the H. W. Dews agency, has sold for J. L. Womack to Charles T. Brown No. 41 Whiteford avenue, a home property, for a consideration of $3,400.

Mr. Dews sold for G. C. Middlebrooks to Mrs. G. C. Kirven, a lot on Sutherland drive, in Sutherland terrace. Mrs. Kirven will build at once.

BUILDING COMPARISONS.

The value of building permits for the month of July just past shows a falling off of about half compared with the corresponding period in 1912.

For the last month the value was $454,942 against $1,03,551 for July, 1912. In July last year a permit was taken for the Ponce de Leon apartments at a value of $450,000, which swelled the month's total to over $1,000,000.

MANSION OFFERS.

Several offers on the governor's mansion property will be ready for submission whenever the legislature has decided just what procedure will be followed. As previously announced, a resolution has been introduced in the senate calling for the appointment of a commission to handle the proposition.

The offer is in the nature of a lease, and another is a location on Peachtree road.

There has been a lot of speculation as to the value per front foot and the lease value of this property. The mansion lot has a frontage of 140 feet on Peachtree street, a depth of about 400 feet on Cain street, and a rear width on Spring street of 140 feet—thus having three street frontages.

The last sale in the same block was at the rate of $2,600 a front foot. This was the Abbott property—an inside lot with a depth of 250 feet with single street frontage.

The value there of course is greater now. Estimates of the value of the mansion property, based on its three street frontages and great depth, range anywhere from $3,500 to $5,000 a front foot.

The corner upon which the Winecoff hotel now stands was leased originally for ninety-nine years at a rental of $1,100 a month. This corner is nearly 63 feet front by 70 feet deep. When leased it had an old two-story store building on it.

Whatever disposition is made of the mansion property will mark another big forward development in close-in Peachtree street.

Saving and Investing

Your Money.

BY JOHN M. OSKISON

It was to Lewis Cass Ledyard that Dave Lamar sent Edward Lauterbach with the suggestion that if the Morgan group of banking and banking interests concerned in the successful dissolution of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railroads wanted to get rid of hostility to them and their plans in congress it would do well to employ Lauterbach as counsel.

It was principally with Ledyard that Lamar talked when, over the telephone, he impersonated Taft, members of congress. It was apparently understood that Ledyard represented that very powerful group of interests.

Who is Ledyard?

A man who has tried to interview Ledyard will tell you that he is about the hardest man in Wall street to talk to. He is a lawyer, a Harvard graduate, a man of affairs, a director in so many corporations that to name them here would require about three inches of type.

According to the story told by Edward Lauterbach to the committee of the United States senate, Ledyard is the man who set out to drive Dave Lamar from Wall street and who was responsible for his own alienation from the good graces of the Morgan group.

It was Ledyard, acting as counsel for the late Colonel Oliver H. Payne, who engineered the sale of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company to the United States steel corporation during the panic of 1907. It was Ledyard who pointed out to Morgan and Frick and Gary the necessity for saving the brokerage firm of Moore & Schley from failure by taking the Tennessee company off its hands—and by saving them from failure, averting a further and more disastrous panic period.

"Close in" is the phrase used to describe Ledyard's relations with the powers which rule in Wall street. Yet Ledyard was the congressional committee that he never did any professional business for Morgan except, a short time before Mr. Morgan died, to draw his will. He is one of the executors of that will.

Able, close-mou....d, suspicious, with a mind which ranges far beyond the mere legal work of his office, Ledyard is the ideal of the old type of financial lawyer.

Prison of Future to Be Pleasure Palace, Thinks Hawthorne

In an article appearing in the August number of "Good Words," the magazine published by the prisoners in the Atlanta federal prison, Julian Hawthorne, the prisoner known as "Moonlight Sonata," The hall is sumptuously furnished with immense jars scattered about holding orange trees covered with blossoms and rose trees.

One of the four is a newcomer, and it is in answer to his questions that the conditions of the prison are explained.

The speaker declares that crime has been recognized as a disease, lawyers have been practically banished, and that the only crimes recognized are killing, lying and stealing. Jails and prisons, he says, are merely reformatories, where men are taught to learn to do better, everything there being furnished with an eye toward their betterment.

In the same issue of the magazine Hawthorne pays a delightful tribute in verse to Mrs. Emma Neal Douglas, of Atlanta, the "Angel of the Federal Prison."

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent. of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in the water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, poisoning stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel: no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleaning dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast ana in an hour you'll feel splendid

Don't take an inferior substitute, some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. 25c. If yours cannot supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

The Soldiers' Home Is a Credit to Georgia

There are many noble heroes of the lost cause living out their last days there, and while they are receiving kind and courteous attention, still some of them are in bad health and suffering with many forms of stomach trouble.

Read what Nuxcara has done for one of these gallant men, Capt. J. F. Hill, who is 80 years old and has been suffering many years with indigestion and stomach trouble, says:

To Whom It May Concern:

Nuxcara is recommended by the undersigned from personal use and from a close study of its effects upon him. It is purely a vegetable preparation for the cure and correction of all stomach troubles, and destroys the funerals of other deleterious drugs. It is emphatically nature's remedy. It regulates the appetite and tones every organ of the stomach and soothes its tissues. Before taking it I had to confine myself to the simplest diet, had fearful attacks of ACUTE INDIGESTION and my bowels were so torpid I had to take pills every other day. Since taking two bottles of Nuxcara I am relieved of all these troubles. EAT WHAT I WISH AND FEEL LIKE A NEW MAN. I unhesitatingly recommend it to all who are subject to any irregularities of the stomach.

Respectfully,

A. F. HILL,

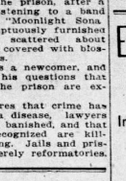
ECZEMA ON BABY'S HEAD AND FACE

In Pimples Like Blisters. Head Perfectly Raw. Hair All Gone. Burned and Itched. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.



Reedy, W. Va. — "My baby boy when three weeks old took the eczema on the head and face. It broke out in pimples and first they looked like blisters and a yellow water would run from them. His head was perfectly raw and his hair was all gone. Everybody said he would never have any more hair. As the sores spread his hair came out. The rough scaling out itched so badly that we had to keep gloves on his hands to keep him from scratching his head and face. He caused us much discomfort. He couldn't rest at night it burned and itched so badly.

"He was treated for eight months and he got worse all the time. So I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We first washed the sores with the Cuticura Soap and covered them with the Cuticura Ointment mornings and at bedtime. We kept a thin cloth on his head. In two months he was completely cured after using the Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) G. A. Dye, Jan. 7, 1912.

Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold everywhere. A single set is often sufficient. Liberal samples of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

will result in easy money in both the south and the west, and they feel that the farmers themselves will reap the greatest and most direct benefits, though it is equally certain that the banks in southern and western cities will share in the general good.

ATLANTA BANKS ON LIST.

John Skelton Williams, first assistant secretary of the treasury, speaking for the department this morning, told The Journal that the $50,000,000 which it is intended to transfer to southern and western banks will be apportioned among the agricultural states on a basis of crop valuation, population and surplus and deposits of the national banks. He added that banks of Atlanta and Savannah would be chosen by the treasury as distributing points for the big government deposits.

"While there are a number of other excellent cities in Georgia, it will be impossible for the treasury department to deal with over two cities in the distribution of this fund," said Mr. Williams. "It is my idea that Atlanta and Savannah will be selected as the Georgia cities. The banks in those cities have correspondents throughout the state and have adequate facilities for handling the situation and taking care of the smaller banks in the country."

CONFIDENT OF BANKS' CO-OPERATION.

When asked if he believed the banks in Georgia and elsewhere in the south would avail themselves of the offer of the treasury department, Assistant Secretary Williams waxed most enthusiastic. He said:

"I regard Secretary McAdoo's proposition as the greatest thing for the farmers of the south that has been attempted by the federal government in half a century. I am entirely confident that the southern bankers will take advantage of the offer, and that the movement of cotton in the southern states will be greatly facilitated."

Mr. Williams declared that, in his judgment, the southern bankers who avail themselves of the offer will use commercial paper and not 2 per cent government bonds, as a basis of their loans from the government. He declared that usually at this period of the year the banks in the south have lots of high class commercial paper and that the treasury department would accept this as collateral and not require the banks to go into the markets to buy 2 per cent government bonds.

SOUTHERN COMMERCIAL PAPER.

"The southern banks have good commercial paper and it will be unnecessary for them to buy bonds in order to obtain the money the treasury intends to transfer as a means of moving the crops," said he.

Assistant Secretary Williams regretted the publication this morning of a statement to the effect that the treasury department was acting under the provisions of Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency act. He stated that such was not the case, and that the department proposed simply to transfer some of the money in its vaults to the bankers of the south and west.

HOKE SMITH'S VIEWS.

Senator Hoke Smith commended the McAdoo statement highly and declared that the farmers of the south would benefit greatly as a result of the policy of the administration.

"I regard the statement of Secretary McAdoo concerning the transfer of money to southern and western banks as indicative of a policy on the part of President Wilson to use the resources at his command to block efforts of New York banks to contract the money market," said Senator Smith. "It is the first time in half a century or more that a president of the United States has had the courage to take a decided a stand in the interest of all the people as against the bankers. The plan is one of the most reassuring and confidence inspiring moves that the administration has made, and I feel confident that the cotton farmers of the south will be among the first to appreciate it. It means that money will be easy in the south this fall, and that the cotton crop will be moved with expedition."

ADAMSON AND HARDWICK.

Congressmen Adamson and Hardwick declared that they had read Mr. McAdoo's statement with great pleasure, and felt that it was a wise move in the right direction.

"I favor any move by the administration that will make it easier for our farmers to market and move their crops," said Mr. Adamson. "I believe the plan of the treasury department will accomplish this."

"I am in hearty sympathy with the plans of the administration to help the farmers of the country," said Mr. Hardwick. "Mr. McAdoo's statement is a wholesome and significant indication of the attitude of the administration. Its operation means much to the farmers of Georgia and other southern states, and it should be commended."

Bankers of Atlanta Praise McAdoo Plan

Warm praise was heard Friday morning among the bankers of Atlanta for the plan of Secretary McAdoo.

COLONEL LOWRY'S VIEWS.

"I have just written to Mr. McAdoo," said Colonel Robert J. Lowry, president of the Lowry National bank, Friday morning. "I think his plan is admirable, and I wrote him a letter congratulating him upon it.

"His proposa lto distribute millions among southern and western banks will not help merely the banks. Primarily it will aid the people—the farmer, the producer. The state of Georgia particularly has a prospect of large cotton and corn crops, and of a large demand for money for the movement of these crops. Already cotton is being picked, soon the marketing of crops will begin, and then the state will be very much in need of money. During the next two or three months money will be needed urgently in this and other southern states and i the west.

"Secretary McAdoo intends to distribut money among the banks in order that this need may be answered, and any stringency be avoided. His move is a very wise one. Certainly it will have the effect of bringing about a better feeling in the business world. The demand for money already is being felt. This bank is even now shipping currency, which will be used to pay for cotton."

WHAT CAPTAINENGLISH SAYS.

Captain James W. English, president of the Fourth National bank, said of Secretary McAdoo's plan:

Aw.,t etaoinshrd etaoicm etaoicmfwyp

"It is a known fact that from June until August this part of the country is in need of money with which to tide over the cotton-growers and to move th ecotton crop. The supply of money during these months is not equal to the demand. Secretary McAdoo proposes to increase the supply until it is equal to the demand, and in this way to prevent the money tightness usual at this season. If Mr. McAdoo is ready and prepared to accept commercial paper as security for deposits, h ecan render a great service to the country."

WILLIAM J. BLALOCK.

William J. Blalock, president of the Fulton National bank ,said:

"Secretary McAdoo's plan, if worked out in a practicable way, will have a most beneficial effect. He is going upon the idea that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Instead of holding back government money to meet any possible crisis, he proposes to prevent any such crisis by distributing money in parts of the country where it is needed."

man of the appropriation committee of the senate, the speaker of the house, the chairman of the ways and means committee of the house and the chairman of the appropriation committee of the house are those who form the state administration, which is charged with the duty of handling the state's business.

"The house has sent to the senate an appropriation bill carrying $280,000 in excess of the anticipated revenues of the state, based upon the expectation of present values being maintained.

"In the year 1910 there was a balance in the state treasury of $81,965. The appropriations for the year 1911 were $227,149 in excess of the anticipated revenue.

"Deducting from the appropriations for the year 1911, this $81,566 left a deficit of $145,183 for that year.

"The excess of appropriations for the year 1912 over the anticipated revenues was $427,000.

"The excess of appropriations for the year 1913 over the anticipated revenues was $345,000, making a total excess for these three years of $921,183.

"The bill that has been sent to you carries an excess of $280,000 over the anticipated revenues, and, if passed, will run the deficit up to $1,201,183.

"I am sure it is only necessary to bring these facts to your attention, to make you realize the gravity of the situation which confronts you and that this senate has only one means to assist the state. This senate is not allowed to originate appropriations, neither is it allowed to originate measures for raising revenue. The only thing which the senate can do, and the only function which the senate can perform under our constitution would be to interpose by its veto between the action of the house and the bankruptcy of the state, and it is the function of the senate to keep the appropriations within the revenues of the state. You are here to see to it that no appropriation bill passes your body so excessive or so improper as to necessitate an executive veto.

"I think that every member of this senate is aware of the responsibility and duty in this crisis that rests upon him, and I am sure that it is only necessary for me to call your attention to these facts to insure your discharging promptly and fearless the duties of your position."
